

RUSSIA SEEKS JAPAN'S FLEETS

Since Bombardment of Port Arthur, No Trace of the Squadron Can Be Found.

RUSSIANS ARE NOW RETREATING

Japanese Army Gradually Driving Opponents Back Into Manchuria Day by Day—Late Reports on the Situation.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.) Seoul, March 12.—It is reported here that the Russians set fire to the town of Wiju on the Korean side of the Yalu river and retreated across the river into Manchuria. The complete Russian evacuation proceeding is due to the Japanese advance to the north. A cavalry skirmish occurred at Khasan north of Anju on March 8th in which the Russians were driven back and their losses are not known.

Have Disappeared
Port Arthur, March 12.—A correspondent for the Central News wired last evening that the Japanese squadron which disappeared after the bombardment and torpedo fight of March 10th, had not yet returned. Yesterday morning the Russian fleet went to sea and returned in the afternoon without having seen the Japanese fleet. There is now the question, did not the bombardment mask some other move of the Japanese in landing troops or rushing transports by the guns or the forts?

In Bad Condition
St. Petersburg, March 12.—The chief inspector of the trans-Siberian railroad reports the line is in bad shape. Trackmen are neglecting their duties. Snow has been allowed to ly and three others were slightly wounded, two sailors were killed and eighteen were wounded.

Begin a Terrific Bombardment

"At 9 o'clock fourteen of the enemy's ships assembled before Port Arthur and a bombardment was begun with the heavy guns of their battleship squadron at long range. This lasted until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. It is estimated that the enemy fired 154 twelve-inch shells. The damage to our vessels was insignificant, and they are again ready for battle. Our losses were one officer slightly wounded and one soldier killed and four soldiers wounded. The illumination of the sea at night by the searchlights mounted at our batteries was most satisfactory, and several times isolated shots from our batteries forced the enemy's torpedo boats to retire.

Russians Cool in Action
"With the commencement of the bombardment at dawn the guns of the fortress replied to the enemy's fire. The crews of all the ships engaged gave proof of remarkable coolness in action. Below decks the work of the day followed its ordinary course, in spite of the shells falling between the vessels and covering

SEVEN MORE OUT OF ORFORDVILLE

Came to Testify Before the Grand Jury This Morning—Harley Christensen "Sassed" His Neighbors.

Seven more witnesses from Orfordville were summoned before the grand jury today. The investigation of the supposed "blind pig" alleged to have been run in the hotel which was formerly managed by Henry O'Rourke, continued this forenoon.

Witness Impermanent
Harley Christensen, one of the witnesses summoned from Orfordville yesterday, did not submit gracefully to the cross-examination by neighbors whom he had been accustomed to tell to mind their own business in the home town, when they pryed into matters he chose to regard as concerning himself alone. He could not get used to them, sitting in judgment. Though he was civil enough when questioned by the district attorney he "sassed" his former fellow citizens. Harley had partaken somewhat too freely of a "temperance" beverage.

Was Sent to Jail
Judge Dunwiddie was called in and gave him a severe lecture and he was placed in the hands of the officers or contempt of court. He was taken to the county jail and kept in the office about fifteen minutes long enough to allow the enormity of his offense to "sink in." After that he was returned to the courthouse.

Took Some Exercise
Several of the Orfordville party were feeling somewhat uneasy over their ordeal with the jury and it is suspected that they partook freely of strong drink to bolster up their ebbling spirits and inspire the bravado which they wished to carry. After Christensen's arrest, several of the group became frightened over the condition of some of their members and hurried them into the open air where they were made to walk vigorously to sober up. Charles Egan, who was mentioned as one of the party who came on the excursion yesterday, is a member of the grand jury. His name was erroneously mentioned as one of the witnesses.

WIFE FOUND WITH SKULL CRUSHED

Husband Dead in Next Room by Asphyxiation—Murder and Suicide.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.) New York, March 12.—Lizzie Gray was found dead in her room with her skull crushed this morning and her husband, Robert Gray, in an adjoining room dead from asphyxiation. It is believed to be a case of murder and suicide.

WOULD PROMOTE ABLE ATTORNEY

Charles Robb of Vermont, Slated for Place in Attorney General's Office.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.) Washington, March 12.—The nomination of Charles H. Robb of Vermont as assistant attorney general was sent to the senate yesterday. Robb is now attorney in the postoffice department and has been active in the investigation of frauds.

The Czechs tried to introduce a novel form of obstruction in the re-election of Deputy Riba presenting an interpellation with a copy of Hauptmann's new play, "Rose Bernd," the whole of which he demanded should be read to the house. The president, however, ruled that this was impossible, as the house would tender itself liable to prosecution for infringing.

AT ST. MARY'S CHURCH SUNDAY

Archbishop S. G. Messmer Will Pay His First Visit to the City Tomorrow.

Archbishop S. G. Messmer, of the Milwaukee diocese will make his first visit to Janesville this evening, arriving over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, at 6:40 tonight. On Sunday morning he will address the Guard of Honor, a large society of men, at St. Mary's church at 8:30 o'clock mass. This will be a high mass and the society will receive the sacraments in a body. There will be special ceremonies at mass in which the archbishop will assist, and will also address the congregation. The choir will be assisted by Prof. Lake's full orchestra at the early mass. In the afternoon the archbishop and the visiting clergy will be entertained by the Rev. Dean E. M. McGlinchey, pastor of St. Patrick's church. In the evening St. Mary's church will address the Catholic societies of Rock county at St. Mary's church at 7:30 o'clock. His subject will be Societies and the Object of Federation. All the Catholic societies of Rock county were invited from the pulpit of St. Mary's church last Sunday to attend the lecture.

About twenty-five of the K. of C. of Beloit council have notified their intentions of attending the lecture and will go with the members of the local council in a body. Rev. F. X. Snyder of Milwaukee will accompany the archbishop to the city and assist in the services.

Bishop Messmer is the fourth archbishop of the Milwaukee diocese and is but 55 years of age. He was born in the Canton of St. Gall, Switzerland, and finished his studies in the university of Innsbruck, Austria, and came to America in 1871. He has labored in the east for twenty-one years, occupying important positions, such as: secretary of the council of Baltimore, professor of Dogmatic Theology at one of the eastern seminaries, and later professor of Canon law at the Catholic university of Washington, D. C. He was appointed bishop of the Green Bay diocese in 1892. He is progressive and an excellent linguist, and a very able man in the field of literature. Archbishop Messmer was installed archbishop of the Milwaukee diocese February 10, of the present year.

DRESDEN SENDS CONGRATULATIONS

Capt. Davidson Completes Arrangements with City for Removal of Sugar Factory to Janesville.

A copy of the Dresden, Canada, Times of Thursday, March 10, reaching Walter Helms' office today, it contains an account of the settlement made by Capt. Davidson with the city regarding the removal of the sugar factory to Janesville. In his address to the common council of Dresden Capt. Davidson said that unfavorably weather for growing, a market price of a dollar less per hundred pounds for the sugar, and the high price of labor in that vicinity, made removal advisable. In its editorial columns the Dresden paper congratulated Janesville. "All we have to do these days is to hear the ominous sound of the hammer dismantling the factory," is the rather pathetic ending. No ill-will is anywhere expressed.

Chairman George D. Dunn of the New York state republican committee may be appointed secretary of the territory of Arizona. Mr. Dunn is a friend of Senator Platt. It has been understood for some time that Governor Odell does not favor Mr. Dunn's reelection as state chairman.

PRICE OF CEMENT STILL GOING UP

Present Figures Prevail, Sixty Per Cent of the Factories Will Go Into Bankruptcy.

According to the statement of M. T. Roche of St. Paul, the western representative of the Alpena Portland Cement company of Alpena, Michigan, made in Madison, the quantity of cement on hand in all the cement manufacturers' warehouses at the present time is practically the amount which was imported during the year. This importation amounted to 2,600,000 barrels. This amount represents about one-fifth the total yearly production which is placed at 20,000,000 barrels. Mr. Roche predicts that if the present price of cement prevails for another year that 60 per cent of the factories will go into bankruptcy. He says that the product is now selling at cost, 85 to 87 cents per barrel, and that the manufacturers are making just $1 per barrel less now than a year ago. He attributes the present demoralizing prices to the greed of the manufacturers last year, which sent the price up to such a figure as to render German and English cement imports profitable.

WELL KNOWN (WOODMAN DEAD

Hon. J. W. White, Attorney for the Modern Woodmen of America, Passed Away Today.

Mrs. Childs, the supreme receiver of the Royal Neighbors of America, this morning received word of the sudden death of Hon. J. W. White of Janesville several times and for many years has been the attorney for the Modern Woodmen of America and for the Royal Neighbors. For the past eight years he has been a member of the beneficiary committee of the Royal Neighbors as well as attorney for the order. Mr. White was one of the best known lawyers in Illinois and his death will not only be a detriment to the two orders he has been so closely associated with, but to the legal profession at large. Mrs. Childs leaves for Rock Island tonight as will all the other principal officers of the two organizations. The funeral will be held on Monday.

TRAINS HAVE A BIG COLLISION

Northwestern and Union Pacific Freighters Meet Near Omaha—One Killed.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.) Omaha, March 12.—A Union Pacific freight train crashed into a Northwestern train at the outskirts of the city today. Switchman Connelly was killed. The rest of the train crews saved themselves by jumping.

STEAMER THOUGHT TO HAVE SUNK

The Propatia, Bound for Halifax From Martinique, Missing for Some Days.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.) Halifax, March 12.—It is generally believed that the steamer Propatia bound from St. Pierre for Halifax has gone to the bottom. It is now long overdue and had been injured. Besides a crew of sixty persons there was a large passenger list of people going to Paris.

Mayor George W. Doty of Edger-ton was a Janesville visitor yesterday. He came to see his uncle, D. C. Burdick, who is ill.

BANDITS MUST PAY PENALTY

Car Barn Murderers Are Found Guilty by the Jury Early This Morning.

THE DEATH SENTENCE NECESSARY

Van Dine, Marx and Neidermeir Will Be Hung by the Neck Until Dead, for a Series of Brutal Murders in Chicago.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.) Chicago, Ill., March 12.—Harry Van Dine, Gustave Marx and Peter Neidermeir are guilty of murder. This is the decision of the jury which went out yesterday afternoon and after debating all night gave their verdict this morning.

Had Dispute
It is said that the twelve men who had the verdict under consideration agreed at once upon the guilt of Van Dine and Neidermeir, but thought that Marx should have a life sentence owing to his having confessed and enabled the other two to be captured. They debated on this all night, and did not reach a decision that all three should be hung until this morning.

Must Hang
The verdict this morning ends one of the most stubbornly fought murder cases in the history of Cook county. For months the attorneys for the three condemned men have tried every quibble of the law to prove their clients guiltless of the awful series of murders they were charged with. It has cost the county a small fortune to prosecute them and their final conviction is a general satisfaction to the public at large.

Lawyers' Work Out
In making his closing remarks to the jury yesterday afternoon Attorney Olson for the prosecution used himself completely up and almost fainted before he finished his demand for a death sentence.

Were Stolid
The three defendants received the verdict stolidly. Neidermeir smiled and Marx exchanged a pleasing glance with his attorney. The excitement in the court room was intense. All three of the prisoners are under twenty-one years of age.

Many Crimes
Three more desperate criminals have seldom been tried in a court in this city. They are known to have taken part in many hold-ups and several murders on the west side, aside from the brutal car-barn murder and robbery when two men lost their lives last August. They escaped detection for many months and it was not until Marx was arrested and gave away the names and their actions that Neidermeir and Van Dine were arrested.

CLEARING FOR ACTION ON A JAPANESE WARSHIP.

The imitative Japanese have for years past been careful and discriminating students of the art of war on the sea. Their ships are modern and their discipline is excellent. Frequent target practice has given them splendid marksmanship, and when they clear for action there are no false motions.

AN EARLY CALL TO ROUNDHOUSE

Fire on the Roof of the Boiler Room Called Out the Department Today.

This morning at 6:15 o'clock an alarm of fire was turned in from box 54, calling the department to the Chicago & North-Western roundhouse where the roof over the boiler-room had caught fire. The cause of the fire was an overheated chimney. A hole about two feet square was burnt in the roof, being the only damage done. The fire was soon extinguished after the arrival of the fire department.

EMPEROR WILLIAM GOES TO ITALY

Will Stop in Spain, to Meet the King. Thence Goes to Rest.

Resort.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.) Bremerhaven, March 12.—Emperor William sailed today for the Mediterranean on the North German Lloyd steamer Koeltig Albert. On his arrival at "Virgo, Spain, he will be met by the king of Spain.

STATE NOTES

The Wisconsin Telephone company has placed telephones in all the fire engine houses of Kenosha without any expense to the municipality.

Joe Lemmerville of Lena was kicked in the abdomen by a horse while working at a camp near Wausauke. He was injured internally and will die.

Every property owner adjoining Root river in Racine, will sign a strongly worded petition to congress urging an appropriation to improve Racine harbor.

The body of Miss Julia Flint, who died in Rome on Feb. 2, arrived at Fond du Lac Friday and was interred in Rietzi cemetery. Her sister, Miss Lillian Flint, is still in Rome.

C. L. Pierce, general land agent of the North-Western road, has been busy securing the right of way for the proposed extension of the company's line northward from Two Rivers.

The jury in the Rietzi tower house case, in which James D. Brown, an insurance agent, was tried on charges preferred by young girls, after being out but little over an hour, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Attorneys for the Milwaukee road have made answer to the suit for $21,750 recently brought by Frank G. Cowie in Kenosha county. The answer states that the company paid to Cowie $2,500, and that this was in full for his services.

Earl Marshall, a queer character of Kenosha, who escaped after a warrant had been issued for an examination into his mental condition, has been found in Chicago. He will be taken to Kenosha and his sanity tested in the county court there.

The city of Kenosha has filed an answer to the suit of $10,000 brought against the city by Mrs. Elizabeth Buschmann and will make an effort to make a test case of the suit. Mrs. Buschmann was injured, it is alleged, by falling on a defective sidewalk.

Miss Martha V. Jackson of Oshkosh and Gilbert Knapp of Shawano, will be married Tuesday afternoon. The bride to be is the daughter of the late Joseph Jackson, one of the early mayors of Oshkosh. The groom is the secretary of the Uphan company at Shawano.

A COSSACK WATCH STATION IN MANCHURIA.

Some time ago Russia, having heard that bands of Japanese were stationed at advantageous points along the Transsiberian railroad for the purpose of disabling Russia's only means of intercommunication between Russia and the east, established a system of watch stations in Siberia and Manchuria. The illustration shows one of these stations garrisoned by Cossacks, whose tribal signs will be noticed over the men's hats.

accumulated and landslides are threatened. A famine has been reported in many places along the line on account of the shortage of provisions brought about by the ordinary traffic to allow the transportation of troops.

Bombardment Fatal
St. Petersburg, March 12.—It is now announced that the Japanese bombardment was very severe and that many persons were killed by the Japanese shells which almost completely destroyed the new portion of the city.

Alexieff's Report
St. Petersburg, March 12.—Under date of March 10 Vicerey Alexieff reports the loss of one Russian torpedo boat and one Japanese torpedo boat in the battle before Port Arthur, as follows:

"Six torpedo boats which went out to sea the night of March 10, four of them being under the general command of Captain Matoussevitch, encountered the enemy's torpedo boats, followed by cruisers.

Sunk One Japanese Boat
"A hot action ensued, in which the torpedo boat destroyer Vlastinid was charged. A Whitehead torpedo and sunk one of the enemy's torpedo boats. On the way back the torpedo boat destroyer Stereguschitchi, commanded by Lieutenant Sergueiev, sustained damages. Her engine was disabled, and she began to founder. By 8 o'clock in the morning five of our torpedo boat destroyers had returned. When the critical position of the Stereguschitchi became evident I belatedly my flag on the cruiser Novik, and went with the Novik and the cruiser Boyar to the rescue.

Russian Lose a Destroyer
"But as five of the enemy's cruisers surrounded our destroyer, and as the battleship squadron was approaching, I did not succeed in saving the Stereguschitchi, which foundered. The crew was made prisoner and the boat was destroyed. On the part of the Russian navy was serious

WEEKLY BUDGET OF UNIVERSITY

GOSHIP—WHAT THE PLANS FOR THE JUBILEE ARE TO BE—CASTING MEDALS

Athletic Talk—General Chit-Chat Regarding the State Varsity and the Students.

A very important step, and one which will prove of great interest to the students and alumni, was taken by the jubilee committee in connection with the celebration to be held in June. It was decided to have made a souvenir of that week, a bronze medal, one of which will be given to the visiting guests, and alumni. The work of designing has been put in the hands of Mr. Adolph Brenu, the well known sculptor, and artist of New York. Mr. Brenu has been given full charge of the designing and the striking of this medal.

The design will probably consist of the seal of the university, which will be struck upon one side of the medal. On the other side will be stamped the date, suitable design, and some description telling of the occasion of the giving of the medal. Mr. Brenu has not yet submitted his design, but it is expected that it will be completed in a short time and will be placed in the hands of the jubilee committee. The decision was reached after careful consideration upon the part of those who have the matter in charge. It was first thought that a souvenir in the form of an appropriate book, would suit the occasion well, but the great amount of work in getting out a souvenir in book form, was found could not be done in the short time left.

Another important point settled by the jubilee committee was the wearing of academic costumes. It was decided that the faculty members would wear gowns at the time of the Baccalaureate address on Sunday, June 5, and during the morning exercises upon the following Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Some difficulty is being met with by the jubilee committee in the sending of invitations. Invitations are being sent to all people who have ever been connected with the university as students. The difficulty so far has been to obtain the names, and addresses of all non-graduate students, or students who have ever taken work in the university. The committee asks that the students not with them in obtaining these names. If and students is familiar with the whereabouts of such non-graduates, they will please communicate with any member of the jubilee committee.

Prepare Exhibit.

The government exhibits prepared by the dairy department for the St. Louis Exposition were packed and made ready for shipment on March 1. The state exhibit for the dairy school is nearly completed and will be ready to forward in a few days.

A miniature model of a four foot long, of the Dairy building here, has been shipped by Prof. Farrington to St. K. Loomis of St. Choboyan, who intends to have it venerated with butter. This will be placed on exhibition in a large show refrigerator at St. Louis and will be a part of the dairy exhibit which is provided with a space 8x16 feet in the exhibition refrigerator rooms, that are supplied for the different states in the Palace of Agriculture.

Goes to Chicago.

The contract for the printing of the 1905 Badger has been let to Pettibone, Sawtell & Co., of Chicago, a large reliable firm who make a specialty of fine printing. These printers have been highly recommended for the completeness of their equipment and the high grade of work which they turn out. Although they have never printed the Badger before, they have handled a number of other college annuals and their work has been very highly praised. Besides the Badger, they have on hand this year a number of other college annuals, among them the year book of the Armour Institute. With the engraving done by the Barnes-Crosby Co., and the printing by Pettibone, Sawtell & Co., the 1905 Badger should compare very favorably with those of the last few years.

Duke Won.

The sophomore open, which was held in Library hall yesterday afternoon, was an exceptional contest considering the number of participants. The scattering marks of the judges. One of the contestants received more than one first in either thought and style or delivery. H. C. Duke, of Hesperia, was awarded first place, with P. H. Schram of Philadelphia second, and M. A. Kilne, junior lay, third.

May Be Dropped.

Emil Breitzkreutz, the first half-miler of the university of Wisconsin track team, is in danger of absolute disqualification for delinquencies in studies. He was conditioned in the recent examinations and was not "harpooned" by the faculty because of the influence of Coach Kilpatrick and Faculty Supervisor Slichter. Unless Breitzkreutz quickly makes up his back work, according to information from a member of the athletic committee of the faculty, he will be disqualified to participate in athletics. The barring of this team without a good half-miler runner, he being the only championship timber training for the event. Danolls and Moery, both interscholastic winners in this event, have become dissatisfied with the coach and have quit training. As Coach Kilpatrick is himself the holder of the world's record in the half-mile run, he is particularly desirous of keeping Breitzkreutz in the running, in order to make a good showing and maintain the reputation of the coach.

COMING APRIL FOOLS' DAY ON GOOD FRIDAY

The Practical Joker Will Get in His Work on That Day—Old and Young Observe It.

Probably this year it may come to pass that we shall be partially free from April fool jokes.

For April Fools' day, the first of April, falls on Good Friday this year, and one cannot be as wicked on Good Friday as on any ordinary Friday.

As St. Valentine's day came on Sunday, it seems that the practical joker is being cheated out of a great deal of his fun.

There was a time when old and young considered April Fools' day as a holiday, and spent the day in merry-making and laughing. But that was many years ago and today the world occupied almost solely by the enfeebled and feeble, puts salt in the sugar, puts bricks under the hat on the sidewalk, and ties strings to the pocket-book lying temptingly under one's foot.

There are really only three kinds of jokes. The joke which is harmless and mild, the practical joke, and the kind good-natured joke, this last being the rarest.

The first is of the kind indulged in by the small boy when he points wonderingly up to the ceiling and murmurs, "What's that on the paper?" and then after one has promptly turned the eyes upward, shrieks the two words which will explain the exquisite joke.

The practical joker almost always hurts, not only the feelings of the victim, but often hurts physically. The practical joker is not tender of one's feelings.

But the last named style of joke, the kindly one—O, that is rare indeed. Is the kind practiced by the person who sends two ten-dollar bills anonymously to needy youth; or the kind practiced only by the little boys who tell the story books who steal out by night, and see the poor widow's woodpile and stack it nicely in the shed, thus saving her a hard-earned fifty cents. It sounds lovely in the stories, but no one has ever had the opportunity to judge the thing in real life, as it has never been done. It has never been discovered where the observance of the day originated, some thinking it was when Satan disguised as the serpent, tempted Eve, and then when the proper time came, said "April Fool." Sort of a practical joke that was.

THE ICE HAS BEEN GRADUALLY RISING

Ice in Rock River Cannot Last Much Longer Against the Press.

Water in the river is rising at this time and it is expected that it will flow through the ice at any time. For several days it has been noticed that the ice has been gradually rising, and the hollows which have been formed have been filled out. Today all these places were gone and in the center of the river there was a rounding shape that gave evidence of the amount of water that was running underneath. Those who have kept watch of the river in the springs gone by say that there are indications that this spring is going to be one of the worst in many years. The ice is much thicker and with the high water coming down the river it is expected the ice will be broken up and may make trouble in this part of the country. The pressure below the dam has carried out the ice and that part of the river for a considerable distance south is now clear.

LUMBERMEN SAY BUSINESS WAS POOR

The Past Winter Has Been a Dull One in That Line—Not Much Building.

According to one of the prominent lumber dealers here, the past winter has been the poorest for lumber business for years. This is accounted for by the extreme cold. People did as little building as possible; also because of the number of small lumber yards springing up in the country. It is stated that they very seldom sold to farmers now-a-days, who live more than four miles from the city, while a few years ago it was common to have them come in fifteen and twenty miles for their supplies.

GOVERNMENT SENT OUT WRONG BRAND

"Summer" Stamps Get Out by Mistake—Post-Marks for Hot and Cold Weather.

Mistakes are made by the government just the same as by individuals. A mistake was recently made by the shipping of postage stamps and as a result postoffices received a notification to lay aside the supply of "summer stamps" sent out by mistake and substitute as so on as possible the "winter stamps." Everybody knows that there are stamps of many colors but most persons do not know that there are summer and winter varieties as well. The summer stamps are gummed to stand the humidity supposed to accompany the warm days of June and August, to say nothing of the rainy days of April and May. In winter the gum on the backs of these is so hard that the stamps become brittle, curl up and break as though they were made of glass. In the summer a winter stamp is the kind that clings to everything it touches with the devotion of the needle to the pole. The soft gum is ready for business without the process of "licking." When the warm days come the winter stamps are placed in a cool dry place and the hard gum stamps are brought out. Some of the summer vintage got into circulation before the mistake was discovered, but when United States Postmaster George Madden sent out his letter recently they were at once put away.

AMONG THE WORLD'S WORKERS

News Notes From Various Sources of Great Interest to the Workman.

Under a state law in Missouri the use of the union label on work done in non-union office constitutes a forgery. Complaint was made by the allied trades council of Kansas City, Mo., recently against a local printer, that he had used the label on work without authority. He was prosecuted by the state, found guilty and fined $100, with the costs added. The defendant did not deny using the label and offered no evidence to show that he had the right to do so.

Thirty-two merchants at Peoria, Ill., were served with state warrants by Deputy State Factory Inspector Adam Mendle, charged with violating the child-labor laws. The Deputy has been in Peoria two weeks, and last Wednesday swore out the warrants. A dozen of the employers appeared in court and paid fines for the violations. The inspector says he will see that the law is observed to the letter.

Mayor Jones, of Toledo, O., says it is the purpose of the manufacturing concern of which he is the head to set aside a portion of the profits from the business as a fund for the relief of its injured employees, and should death follow as a result, for the support of those who may have been dependent upon them.

A monster petition, signed by 45,000 white male adult residents in the Transvaal, requested the passage of a law providing for the importation of Asiatic labor into the colony was presented to the legislative council. It is claimed that the petition represents the views of 7 per cent. of the white residents.

Committees from the Knight of Labor have been appointed to wait upon Governor Odell to urge him to provide for additional factory inspectors as it is charged children under twelve are being employed in Greater New York contrary to law.

Since the ten-hour law in the bakeries has been declared constitutional in New York City, which says that the factory inspectors do not enforce it, are preparing to do so by strikes.

The wage scale of the painters was signed at Pittsburgh last week, and the lockout so far as this craft is concerned is declared off by the builders' exchange league. Almost 1,000 painters who have been idle for about three months have returned to work.

Judge Hunter, of the Superior court, has perpetually enjoined the Cooks and Waiters' Alliance of Eureka, Cal., from maintaining a boycott against the Fair Wind restaurant, for interfering with conducting of the business of the restaurant. The union will appeal.

Damage suits growing out of the military control of the Colorado miners' strike have been called in Victor, Col., aggregating $1,000,000, and naming Governor Peabody among the defendants.

Union Completed.

The union of the two Methodist churches was completed last Wednesday afternoon at the Central M. E. church by bringing together the two missionary societies. This is the last of the several societies to unite, and the union was delayed on account of some bequests which could not be sooner be legally transferred. The officers elected were: Mrs. Laura Cheeny, president; Mrs. A. C. Hunt, secretary; Mrs. E. W. Lowell and Mrs. Edward Burnett, corresponding secretaries; Mrs. J. M. Bostwick and Miss Jessie Williams, treasurers. The society is numerically strong and enrolls a list of active and intelligent workers.

The price of eggs has finally fallen from 25 to 20 cents. This is a welcome piece of news to lovers of henfruit, especially to those who observe lent. The reason for the high soaring of eggs during the past winter was not caused by a strike on the part of the hens but the unusual cold weather was responsible for the unfortunate situation. Since the beginning of the moderate spell the prices began to go down until they reached the 20 cent mark. With the oncoming of spring it is expected that the reduction will continue until the normal price is reached.

Flour Remains High.
"I don't think that the price of flour will go down until the new wheat comes in," said Geo. B. Dedrick of the firm of Dedrick brothers this morning. The present price for the best grade of flour is $1.55 at retail. The "good" old biscuits that mother used to bake will, doubtless be reduced in size as long as the price of the dough continues to soar high.

Potatoes Getting Scarce.
Farmers who still have a supply of tubers on hand from last summer hold them back in anticipation of charging exorbitant prices. Local grocers are of the opinion that the shortage of potatoes will not occur. The prices up higher than at present. They sell at 30¢ per bushel.

Good House Produce.
Some splendid heads of cabbage are now on the market. Small sized heads sell at 10 cents while the larger ones are sold at 5 cents per pound. Fresh house produce is now finding a ready sale, there always being a large demand for lettuce and radishes in spring. The former sells at 5 cents a bunch, while the latter retail at 5 and 7 cents a bunch, according to quality. Cauliflower grown in the south brings 25 cents per head. Excellent green onions are sold at a bunch for 10¢. Head-lettuce and strawberries are also on the market today as well as spinach. Cucumbers can also be had.

Oranges Plentiful.
Never before have oranges been so plentiful and of such good quality as this season. There is at present an enormous consumption of this delicious fruit in Janesville, especially of the navel variety from California. Another remarkable fact is that most of the oranges this winter are seedless. The prices range from 15 to 40 cents per dozen, according to size and quality. Lemons, also grown in California, retail at 25 cents per dozen. There is also some good apples to be had, the best variety selling for 50 cents per peck.

No Cranberry Shortage.
Cranberries that were retailing at 12 cents a quart early in the winter now cost 10 cents. It was feared last fall that the crop had failed, owing to the wet season. These fears, however, were all in vain; for it was soon learned that there was an abundant supply of the berries to be had. A number of flower city grocers have the Cape Cod cranberries on the market.

Much Demand for Fish.
Since the beginning of lent there has been a great demand for fish. The best grade of smoked salmon and smoked halibut retail at 20 cents per pound while salted salmon sell at 10 cents. Mackerel bring from 14 to 20 cents per pound and salted white fish from 10 to 12 cents. Holland herring and round short herring are also much in demand, selling at 10 and 5 cents per pound.

Nail Plant is Destroyed.
St. John, N. B., March 12.—The plant of the Maritime Nail works, in this city, has been burned. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

Dudley Field Kills Himself.
Pueblo, Col., March 12.—Dudley D. Field, nephew of the late Cyrus W. Field, committed suicide here.

Baltimore, Md., March 12.—Examination of the seismograph at the Johns Hopkins University shows the effect of the earthquake at Lima, Peru, March 4.

San Francisco, October 26th.
To Peoples Drug Co., and King's Pharmacy.

Dear Sirs: There are daily occurrences in this city that ought to be known all over the world. A gentleman, an octogenarian, a distant relative of Robert Fulton, of first steamship fame, has saved the lives of hundreds (probably thousands) after they were believed to be beyond human aid. His discovery is undoubtedly the long-sought cure for Bright's disease and diabetes.

This is not easy of belief and it is the purpose of a number of business and professional men of this city (of whom I am one) to tell the people. You are hereby authorized to tell all those in your city who have either Bright's Disease or Diabetes that nearly nine-tenths of them can recover. Among the business men who are giving moral and financial support and who would give nothing if the above was not strictly true, are Hon. H. M. Burns, President, Canfield Mining Company; Edward Mills, President of Bullock & Jones Company; Captain Roberts, President Bock and Loyalton R. R. Co.; Thos. Kirkpatrick, Capitalist; D. E. Bender, Capitalist; W. C. Price, Capitalist; Wm. Sharp, Capitalist; C. W. Clark, Capitalist, and many others. The pamphlets herewith are to be given to all inquiries without charge. They give the complete history of our long and exhaustive investigation.

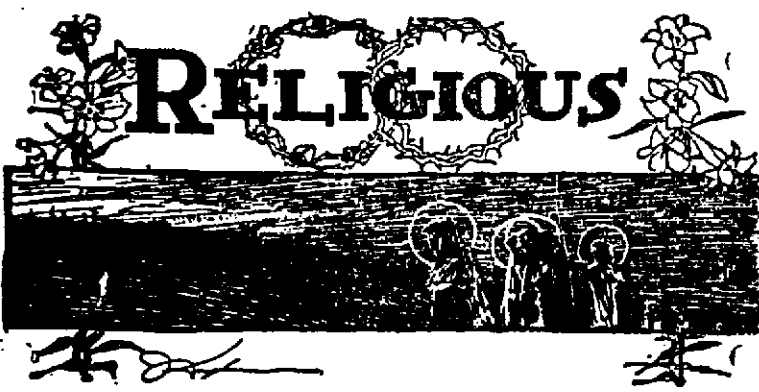

Yours truly,
A. E. SHATTUCK,
President Pacific States Type Foundry.

BETTER TRADE IN ALL LINES HEAVY DEMAND BY CONSUMERS

Buying Strong Among Retailers, With Large Transactions in Staples and Luxuries—Equal Inquiry for Food-stuffs and Fancy Apparel.

Chicago, March 12.—Dun's Weekly Review of Chicago Trade says:

"The return of more seasonable weather conditions and lessened difficulty in the movement of commodities were favorable factors. Reports show gain in the distribution of goods and larger receipts of farm products, while the manufacturing industries advanced in activity. New business improved in the volume of finished iron and prices were strengthened, although commitments were mainly confined to present requirements.

"Notwithstanding the high average cost the final consumption of necessities has continued strong and buying was heavier in leading retail lines. Jobbing sales of spring wares reached a satisfactory aggregate, with frequent requests for early shipment to Western points. Large transactions were closed in the dry goods, millinery, clothing and footwear divisions, and dealings were increased in suits and cloaks, men's furnishings and hats and caps. Easier deliveries placed groceries and canned goods in better position and sales widened. Mercantile collections generally presented little complaint.

Urgent Call for Iron.

"The demand for iron and steel is most request. Prices assumed a higher tendency for all but railroad requirements. New specifications have shown very plentifully, and with the heavy construction and building work now inaugurated there will be an enlarged absorption of metals and lumber.

"Receipts of lumber ran 20 per cent short of the volume a year ago. Prices are firm and buying good in hard woods and for building uses. New building permits and real estate sales both show some increase over the corresponding week of 1903. Receipts of hides were 2,722,491 pounds, as compared with 3,227,297 pounds the previous week and 1,479,436 pounds a year ago. The market was quiet but steady at quotations recently ruling. Leather and shoe demands were moderately augmented.

Lighter Grain Shipments.

"Grain shipments were 2,372,457 bushels, 16 per cent under those of a year ago. With the recent fall in values improvement was looked for in the spot demand, but actual sales failed to develop importance, and receipts of all breadstuffs, except corn, were heavier. Prices declined steadily until Wednesday, when recovery set in, but, compared with the closings a week ago, quotations have declined in wheat 1 cent, in corn 1/2 cent and in oats 1/4 cent. Provisions were in better demand and advanced, in pork 5 cents per barrel, in lard 5 cents and in ribs 1 1/4 cents. Receipts of live stock were 253,251 head, as compared with 297,434 head a year ago, showing the first notable decrease this season. Choice hogs and heavy hogs both declined 10 cents per hundredweight, but sheep were in request and gained 15 cents.

"Failures in the Chicago district number thirty-five, against twenty-three the previous week and twenty-four a year ago."

BUFFALO BILL WANTS A DIVORCE

Petition is Filed in Wyoming Charging Wife With Cruelty.

Denver, Col., March 12.—A petition for divorce filed in the district court of Big Horn county, Wyoming, Jan. 9, last by Colonel William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) has just been made public. The complaint charges cruelty and alleges that on Dec. 25, 1900, Mrs. Cody attempted to poison the plaintiff. Another ground on which plaintiff asks a decree is that the marital relation has been intolerable to him by his wife's refusal to entertain his friends at his former home at North Platte, Neb. Mrs. Cody, who is at North Platte, denies her husband's charges and will contest the suit. Col. and Mrs. Cody were married at St. Louis March 6, 1885.

Headless Body in Bay.

Bridgeton, N. J., March 12.—The police authorities are endeavoring to unravel the mystery surrounding the finding of the bodies of a man and a woman in Delaware bay, opposite Bayside. The woman's body is headless.

Portrait Brings $35,000.

New York, March 12.—A full-length portrait of Baron Arnold Le Roy of Holland, painted by Van Dyck, the Dutch master, probably in 1601, has been sold here to a collector for $35,000.

No Quarter for Rebels.

Berlin, March 12.—The troops in German Southwest Africa have been ordered not to give any pardon and to take no prisoners, but to shoot all rebel Hereros.

Twenty Hurt in Collision.

New York, March 12.—In a crash between a trolley car and a cross-town horse car a score of passengers were injured.

Ice Gorge at Rock Island.

Rock Island, Ill., March 12.—Rock Island is threatened by a big ice gorge that is rapidly forming in the Mississippi.

True merit is like a river—the deeper it is, the less noise it makes.—Chicago Journal.

Bars Negroes From Walks.

Johannesburg, March 12.—Yielding to the pressure of public opinion, the commissioner of police has prohibited colored persons, including coolies, from using the sidewalks of Johannesburg.

Try to Oust Teacher.

Circleville, O., March 12.—Efforts are being made to oust Miss Ethel Stone, a teacher, because she flirted with a young man from one of the school windows.

Peculiar Effect of Injury.

Binghamton, N. Y., March 12.—Edward Smith was struck on the head by a tree and has lost all memory of his life for forty years and imagines he is a boy again.

Weds Factory Girl.

Millville, N. J., March 12.—Homer Stafford, a rich young man of this city and Maude Evans, a pretty factory girl of Perth Amboy, have been married.

Boy Addresses Legislature.

Trenton, N. J., March 12.—The New Jersey assembly voted the privilege of the floor to Harry Scovel, a 5-year-old boy, during a session.

Race Agitation at Prague.

Vienna, March 12.—Disturbances at Prague are part of an agitation revolving the old and troubling question of race and language.

Victim of Ghouls.

New York, March 12.—Police say Abraham Newman, gem dealer, found dead, was not murdered, though robbed after death.

Threaten Railroad Strike.

Hartford, Conn., March 12.—A great strike is threatened on the New Haven Railroad because fifty daily trains are to be taken off.

La Grippe.

If you have LaGrippe, you want to get rid of it quick. You do not want it to leave you weak and miserable. You want to avoid those dangerous, lingering organic troubles which follow most attacks of this disease.

If this is true, you should take

at once to break up the attack, strengthen and build up the nervous system and restore your vital energy. Nothing will do this so thoroughly and quickly as Nervine. Relieve the aches and pains with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and the road to permanent recovery is short.

"My doctor informed me I had a severe case of La Grippe, but his medicine did me no good. After taking one and a half bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine I was again able to resume my work. I am entirely cured and have felt none of the effects since."

J. C. HELFREY, 4122 Main St., Pittsburg, Pa.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold under a positive guarantee that if the first bottle does not benefit your druggist will return your money. We stand back of this guarantee.

JW COMPANY IS TO START SOON

ROCK COUNTY STONE COMPANY
FILES ARTICLES TODAY.

BEGIN WORK MONDAY ON

Factory—To Manufacture the Harmon
S. Palmer Hollow Building Stone—
Janesville Men Incorporated.

Articles of Incorporation of the Rock County Stone Company were filed this morning with the secretary of state at Madison. The incorporators are Grant U. Fisher, E. D. Roberts and P. J. Mount of this city. The capital stock is five thousand dollars. This company will erect a factory opposite Boub's brewery and will manufacture the Harmon S. Palmer Hollow Concrete Building Stone.

Begin at Once
In speaking of the matter today Mr. Grant Fisher said: "We shall begin our building operations at once. We have secured ten acres of fine land opposite the Ben brewery and on Monday next will start erecting the large cement-house and the sheds for the machinery and dynamo. We have purchased the right to manufacture this kind of building stone and from the present outlook will have enough work to keep us busy all through the summer."

Machinery Here
"Our machinery arrived this morning. In total it weighs seven thousand pounds and was manufactured in Milwaukee, where all the machinery for this Palmer Hollow stone is constructed. There are numerous moulds and plates including those for rock face, ornamental, smooth face and window sill. One beauty of this special kind of building stone is that we could take our machinery to Edgerton, Evansville or Milton should we have a contract for a special kind of material and manufacture it on the spot where the building is to be erected."

Blocks Locked In
"We already have the contract for the new electric power-house, and have our cement for this work ordered. It will be shipped as soon as our factory is up and ready to receive it. We shall use Portland cement in our work. A man will come to set up the machinery and then I will take charge of the plant. When we are running we shall employ sixteen hands and perhaps more. The sheds will be in the neighborhood of thirty two feet wide and a hundred feet long. The material could be manufactured out of doors but we prefer to have sheds and a permanent establishment."

New Material
The Palmer Hollow Building Stone is a new invention and is being widely used. It is much easier to handle than large stone blocks and is being cast each block fits into the one just previously made so that the usual iron rods are not necessary to have it knit together firmly."

SEEKS TO RECOVER FROM THE PLUMBER

Testimony Was Taken Yesterday in Action of Palmer vs. Green, Over Alleged Defective Heating Plant.

In municipal court yesterday testimony was taken in the case of W. F. Palmer vs. Fred E. Green, an action brought to recover $400 damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff in removing from his Court street residence a $1,500 hot-water heating plant that failed to do the work for which it was installed. The defendant claims that the heating plant was set up according to specifications made by the architect and that the fault lay with the brick chimney which was not constructed according to the plans. Architect Ponack of Madison and A. G. Crips, a heating expert from Peoria, Ill., were called to testify by the defense and Landford Sweeney of the Grand hotel testified as to the excellency of the plant installed in his hotel, which is similar to the one placed in the Palmer home.

SOCIETY.

Lovers of fine pictures in this city are to have an opportunity to gratify their tastes in the near future. Under the auspices of the Janesville Art league the Thurbur collection of from seventy-five to a hundred water-colors and oil paintings is to be brought from Chicago and exhibited in the new art room of the public library. The pictures will be hung for a period of three days, either the last week in March or the first in April. Mr. Thurbur is one of the leading artists in Chicago and his collection includes many imported masterpieces that are worth small fortunes. He is a critic of note and has given lectures in many cities in the United States. Besides the paintings a number of selected reproductions in black and white, suitable for school decorations will be shown and one or more of these may be purchased by the school art auxiliary providing there are any "proceeds". Mrs. Charles Tarrant, president of the League is chairman of the art committee; Mrs. J. F. Pember is chairman of the exhibition committee; and Mrs. Fred Capelle is chairman of the school art auxiliary.

Another indication of the approach of spring—and this is true—is the organization of a walking club by several of the young society ladies of Janesville. A meeting was held yesterday to perfect the arrangements and it was decided to maintain great secrecy owing to the fact that the members are determined not only to walk, but to walk gracefully. An instructor in Poland is to be the constant companion and critic on the early morning jaunts. Whether or not the "Greenland bend" is to be cultivated cannot be learned but it suffices to say that a great reform of some kind is brewing. The tours will begin at six o'clock in the morning and jewelers report an unprecedented run on alarm-clocks. The distances will be gradually lengthened from a trivial sprint to Monterey in long journeys to neighboring cities.

Bishop Nicholson of the Episcopal church will make his annual visit to the two Episcopal churches in this city the fourth Sunday after Easter, which will be May 1st.

Mrs. Peter L. Myers is at her home in New Richmond visiting her parents. She expects to remain for several weeks returning to Janesville early in the spring.

While Janesville is socially dead during the lenten period Fort Atkin is socially gay. Last evening the Owl club of that city gave a dance party that was unusually gay. Janesville people who attended were Miss Elma Murdock and Messrs. Verne Murdock and Charles Tallman.

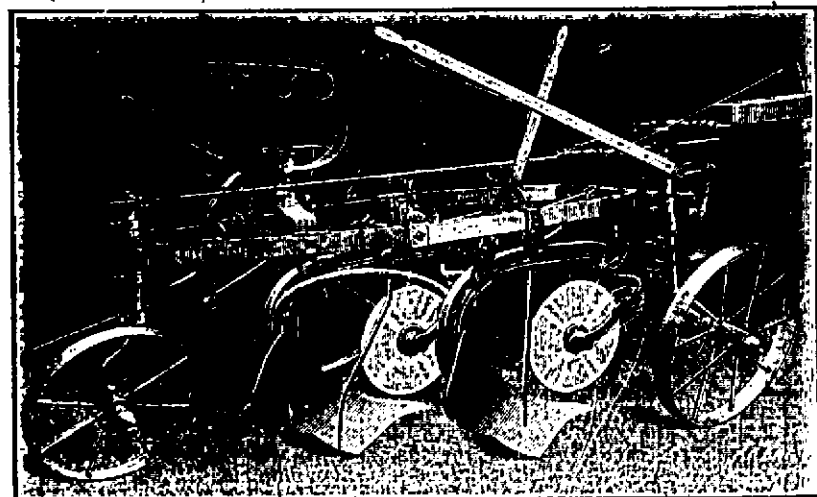

Informal card parties and five o'clock teas have been in vogue since lent began. Several little-coterie of young women have spent afternoons sewing with a dainty five o'clock tea at the end of their afternoon's work. Whilst more than enough has been played during the past month. In some cases the lenten denial has taken the form of no refreshments at these little parties.

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

[Copyright, 1903, by G. L. Kilmer.]

IT is an old saying that "an army travels on its belly." In other words, nature insists upon the motto for soldiers, "No bread, no fight." Putting the word "cracker" for bread and road for line, the famous cracker line at Chattanooga was a road for bringing bread to the soldiers in the trenches. At the close of October, 1863, the Federal Army of the Cumberland, transferred from the command of Rosecrans to that of "Pap" Thomas, its savior at Chickamauga, was preparing to fight for its existence at Chattanooga.

The Federal line at Chattanooga, as the saying is, but owing to the lay of the land, Bragg's Confederate army on the outside held the Federal. They couldn't get out without running the gauntlet of Confederate batteries and muskets; they couldn't stay without eating. Chattanooga lies in a bend of the Tennessee river, shut in on the north, where the Federal approached it by rugged mountain barriers. The narrow valley of the river and the tributary Lookout valley opening to the west gave the only means of ingress possible to the beleaguered army. The Confederates held the west and south banks of the river, including Lookout valley, and the only road available for Thomas' bread train was close to the river on the north side. General Joe Wheeler's raiding troopers dashed at the road in vain. The Yankees held on like death, for to let go was to starve. Finally the Confederates posted a line of sharpshooters ten miles long on the south bank to shoot the horses and drivers of the bread wagons. This scheme worked well, and the wagons had to travel a tortuous mountain road so difficult that it became a serious question whether the army could live and fight at Chattanooga.

But there were schemers in the Yankee camp, and hunger is a sharper wit. Far down the Tennessee, west of the town, lay Hooker's Federal corps. In front of Hooker, Lookout valley stretched away to Brown's Ferry, near Chattanooga. This valley and Lookout mountain on its southern side were occupied by Longstreet's Confederate troops, two brigades placed there as a support to the sharpshooters, whose line extended across the eastern or Chattanooga outlet of the valley. As a further backing for the sharpshooters to guard them from sudden attack by mounted Federals, the Confederates planted a battery on the eastern point to their reserves, followed by the 1,400 Federals, who formed a line of battle on the crest of the hill and began to throw up light barricades. Meanwhile the boats rowed over to the north ferry landing, took in two Federal brigades and struck out for the other bank. The Confederates made one dash at the barricades, but the Federals stood their ground. After the supporting brigades had landed the pontoons were formed into a bridge, and the first step in a cracker line through Lookout valley was accomplished. Now for the Hooker end of the business.

Hooker's corps started from Bridgeport the morning of the 28th and marched rapidly along the valley, two divisions bivouacking two miles from Brown's Ferry, the third, Geary's, halting at Wauhatchie, two miles back, as rear guard. When the Army of the Cumberland saw Hooker's men coming in from cracker headquarters they greeted them with shouts from the hill-tops, bands played and banners waved. Meanwhile Longstreet, from Lookout mountain, had seen Hooker's march and determined to take a hand in the fate of the Yankee cracker line. He dispatched Jenkins' division to move by stealth and fall upon Geary from the rear while his men lay sleeping in their bivouac. Law's brigade, which had been driven from the ferry by Hazen and lay at hand in the mountains, marched in the darkness to a hill lying in the interval between Geary and the other divisions.

As often occurs in night attacks, the assaults failed in the programme of two simultaneous separate assaults. Midnight passed and no signal was given that Jenkins had struck Geary. Longstreet stood upon the mountain ready to order other troops in, but as no sign came he rode away, thinking the whole plan had miscarried.

Jenkins' South Carolina brigade under Colonel Bratton took up the fight alone and rushed upon Geary's bivouac. The veteran General Greene, father of the present New York police commissioner, a soldier over sixty years of age, turned out his brigade and handled Bratton roughly. But the Confederates were determined to smash Geary and rallied a second time to the charge. Just then orders came from Jenkins to Bratton to retreat, for the command was in danger of being cut off by a column which came running up from the ferry to the help of Geary.

The sound of fighting on Geary's line reached the ears of General Howard at Hooker's camp, two miles away, about 1 o'clock in the morning. He quickly put the brigade of Colonel Orlando Smith on the road to Wauhatchie at double quick. The Seventy-third Ohio had the advance, followed by the Thirty-third Massachusetts. These troops knew that there had been an interval left the day before between Geary and the rest of their division and were taken by complete surprise at receiving a scattering volley of bullets in their faces. These were fired by Law's skirmishers.

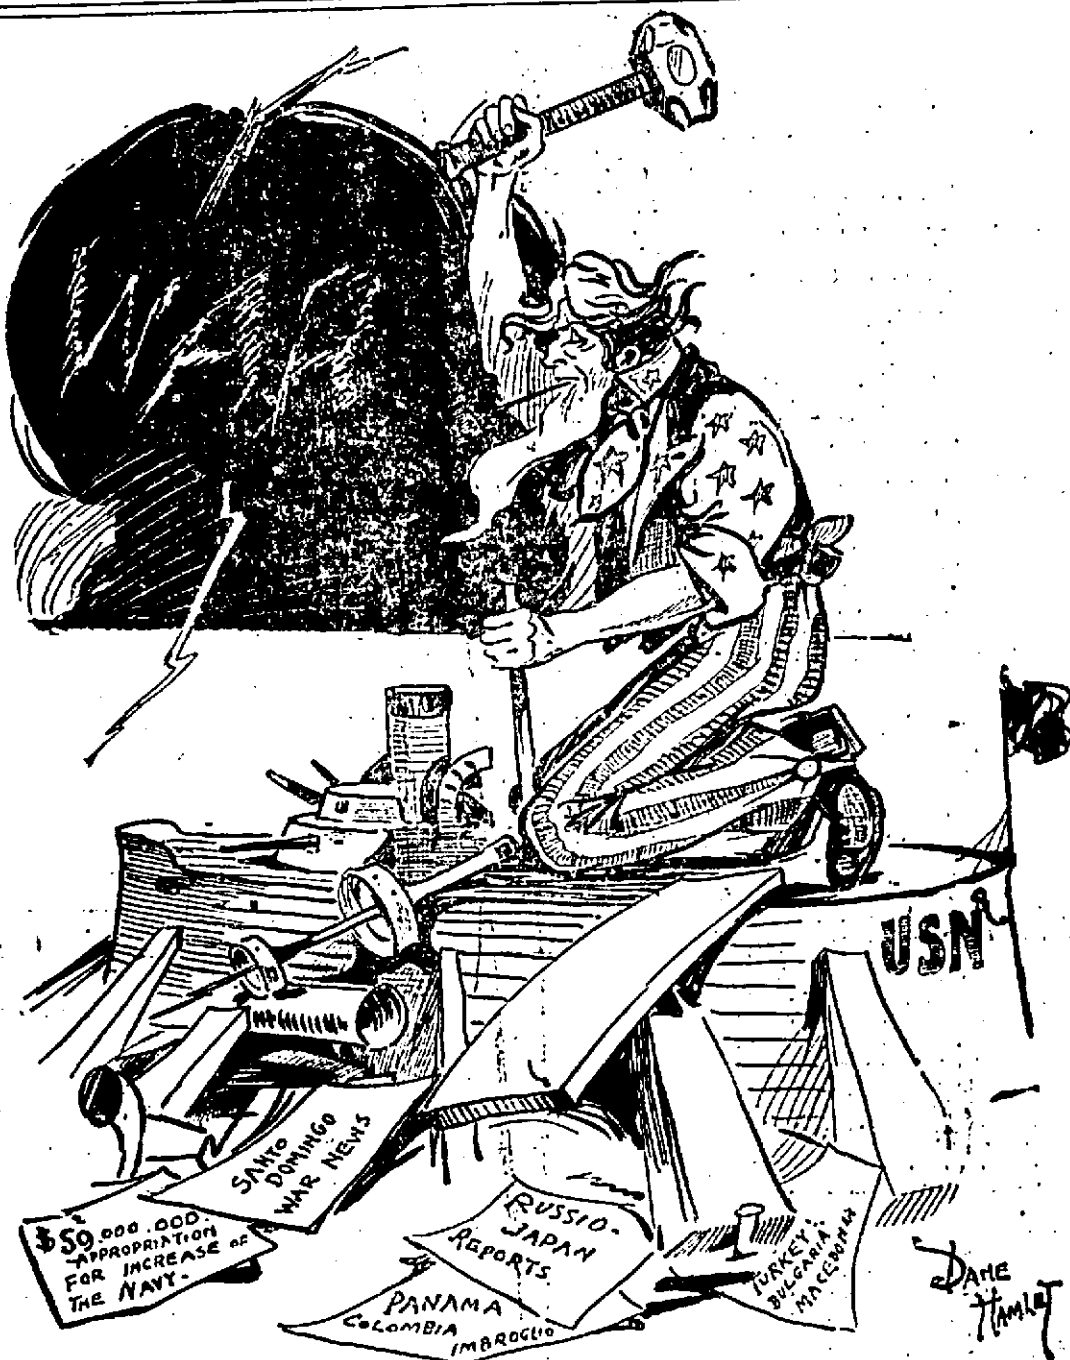

Colonel Smith halted his line and sent out skirmishers, who located the enemy on one of two contiguous hills. Facing this hill the Ohio and Massachusetts men moved up in the darkness, and the bold advance was met by another outburst of firing, this time from the other hill. The bullets raked the line lengthwise. Colonel Smith wheeled his command to face the new enemy and charged up the hill. The hillside was steep and rugged, being covered with timber and underbrush.

Fortunately for the assailants, the Confederate fire passed over their heads as they climbed the hill. When within forty paces of the summit the ground was open, and the moonlight revealed the line to the waiting foe. The Confederates had slashed the young forest trees to block the way for the assailants and while the line tolled through the obstruction poured in a murderous fire. Replying to the fire, as they advanced, the Ohio men moved up until the left of the regiment was within two rods of the Confederate line of battle. Suddenly a terrible volley from the Confederate left swept down the line, and it was forced to fall back or be annihilated.

On the left voices were shouting: "Don't fire into your own men!" "Cease firing!" "You are killing your own friends!" In climbing the hill the Massachusetts men had drifted away to the left and broken connection with their Ohio comrades. Some of the bullets aimed at the Ohio men passed over their heads and struck the Massachusetts men, who supposed from the direction whence they came that they were fired by their own people. In this confusion the Thirty-third Massachusetts fell back down the hill.

After a brief delay Colonel Smith brought his regiments in touch again, and the whole line charged gallantly, driving Law's men from the hill. This feat of arms, ended with the bayonet, cost the assailants 120 men and opened the Cracker line for good. When the sound of Colonel Smith's firing was heard on the summit of the hill General Jenkins feared that Bratton's line in its fight with Geary would be cut off from retreat. He ordered Bratton to save himself, and when Law noticed that the fight at that end of the field had ceased he knew that his own column was in danger of capture by Geary's men. Thus Longstreet was driven out of Lookout valley, and it served as a route for hauling rations to the Federals in Chattanooga until Bragg was driven from Missionary ridge.

STRENGTH OF JAPAN

MIKADO'S PEOPLE SUBLINE IN THEIR PATRIOTISM.

Intense Love of Country is Universal in the Island Empire—Pathetic Instances of Devotion Given by a Young Girl.

(Special Correspondence.)

If war be averted between Japan and Russia it will be a new proof how strong those age-old ties are which everywhere in the present day work silently for peace. Taken each by each, some of these forces would doubt be considered trivial and feeble, but they help each other, and the sum total of their influence is shown at this moment with equal plainness both in the Far and the Near East. Yet what may sometimes greatly depress an observer who loves his kind, and believes in the ultimate triumph of reason and concord, is to notice how slowly the race learns the simple lessons of its own welfare. Manchuria is an example of this. Does the name seem new to anyone or the historic fact a novelty that the destinies of Russia, of China and of Japan should all be mixed up with it? More than 600 years ago the same races were at war for much the same reasons as might to-day make a battlefield of the Chinese province. Manchuria was the domain and starting point of Genghis Khan and Kublai Khan. Thence rolled forth across all Asia and half way over the Continent of Europe those Tartar hordes which nearly turned the globe into one vast barbarous and blood-stained China. In those days Kublai Khan launched his great expedition against Japan, and the story of the Spanish Armada and of England's triumph over it was almost exactly anticipated by what the Japanese people did to save their islands. A most curious picture of that ancient struggle, painted on chicken skin only a short time after the Tartar invasion, was brought to me in Tokio and offered at a price I would readily have given. But it was so plainly a precious document of state, with the strange costumes depicted and ancient forms of armor, weapons, boats and bridges that I sent the ignorant possessor to the emperor's palace, and his Imperial majesty gladly enlarged the remuneration demanded and placed it in the Royal Library.

What makes me recall it and wish there may be no second Manchuria conflict is that there were groups of women in several of its sections, Chinese and Japanese ladies and waiting maids pursuing the wounded, so that even in so distant a day war, with its terror and ruin, had also its tenderness. And this, again, set me thinking that the greatest force which could be exercised against warfare and in favor of the universal peace for which the planet yearns will come when women do their part to break the swords and silence the drums. They might do much more than they know. I do not think there is any need to teach Japanese women about the pity and the misery of warfare. That great and true friend of peace, the present Czar of All the Russias, has journeyed among the quiet, bright, happy cottages of the island empire, and well knows how unwelcome would be the necessity which took the fisherman from his nets and the peasant from his rice fields all along the sunny shores which look to Korea and to Manchuria. He knows, moreover, even if his turbulent colonels on the frontier forget, how strong is the loyalty in every Japanese home, and how formidable is the strength which the unchanging patriotism of the Mikado's subjects gives to his arms. In the matter of medical help and well-kept hospitals a Japanese army is perhaps better equipped than any in the world. The czar cannot have forgotten an incident of his own sojourn in Japan, when a crack-brained fanatic struck a blow at that head, sacred to the whole land as being the head of its government. One young girl, more heartbroken than even the others at the stain thus imprinted upon the hospital of Dai Nippon, did a deed which the czar well remembers. She composed a pathetic letter to her lord, the Mikado, deploring the disgrace which had come to his people and the whole country by such an act of frenzy, quoting in it examples of ancient days, when the humblest were sometimes permitted to become a sacrifice for the highest and most noble. Provided with this letter, she carried it herself to the threshold of the palace, upon which, in accordance with the old customs, she laid her little foolish but faithful forehead, and then, retiring to a lonely spot in the neighborhood, with misgivings, but sublimely unselfish devotion, she put an end to her own existence, and was found lying dead, an offering, as she conceived, which the gods and the emperor—nay, perhaps even the August and illustrious stranger or himself—might accept to the excuse and purgation of Japan. tion which contains children of such a spirit cannot be conquered and will never be lightly attacked by prudent enemies. Formidable indeed, as are the land and sea forces of the Island Empire, its inner strength consists in the intense loyalty and universal self-respect and passion for duty which are the common qualities of the forty-five millions of Japanese, so ignorantly disparaged by the journals of Moscow, St. Petersburg and other capitals. Those Muscovite colonels understand and care little for all this, being everywhere ready, for the sake of pay, and promotion, to embarrass the policy of their sovereign, and to push Russia, through falsehood and bloodshed, to territorial expansion. Yet they would learn the depth and meaning of it in war, nor can they be wholly insensible to the sufferings of those Russian homes, the lowly counterparts of the cottages of Japan, from which the cruel conscription year by year drags away the breadwinners, leaving behind distress and bereavement, and tearing away the young peasant from the family hearth and his familiar pine woods. No such benevolent arrangements are prepared for the Russian soldiers as are never neglected by the Red Cross societies of Tokio, Osaka, Nagasaki and the other Japanese towns and cities. The wounded mujik, the fever-stricken Cossack, has a hard lot compared with that of the hardy Japanese line-man, whose courage in battle and perfect self-restraint in victory astonished the Russians themselves during recent military events in China. Nature has given them the task, which once seemed impossible, of linking together the East and the West by their unique civilization, and at the present moment it is, perhaps, the very greatest interest of humanity at large that Japan should fulfill her splendid and serviceable destiny without the shock and sorrow of a war which she does not fear, but does not wish for.

Cash Registers in Glasgow. Cash registers are all but universal in stores in Glasgow. Modern office furniture and office appliances are superseding the older styles. Even official correspondence is beginning to yield to the omnipresent typewriter.

Prohibits Whaling. Henceforth whales are to be sacred to the Norwegian fishermen. The Norwegian parliament has passed a bill prohibiting the catching and landing of whales on the coast for the next ten years.

Gold in the Vatican. The gold contained in the medals, vessels, chains and other objects preserved in the Vatican would make more gold money than the whole of the present European circulation.

Little Japs. A moment's reflection, as are the land and sea forces of the Island Empire, its inner strength consists in the intense loyalty and universal self-respect and passion for duty which are the common qualities of the forty-five millions of Japanese, so ignorantly disparaged by the journals of Moscow, St. Petersburg and other capitals. Those Muscovite colonels understand and care little for all this, being everywhere ready, for the sake of pay, and promotion, to embarrass the policy of their sovereign, and to push Russia, through falsehood and bloodshed, to territorial expansion. ## TWIN BATTLES ON BAYOU TEGHE

April 13-14, 1863

[Copyright, 1903, by G. L. Kilmer.]

APRIL 13 and 14, 1863, two sharp actions were fought at Fort Blisland and Irish Bend, La., in the tedious campaign of opening the lower Mississippi to Federal ships of war. Grant's plans for reducing Vicksburg were still hazy. The Confederate garrison there drew supplies from the Red river country. Port Hudson's guns still frowned upon the channel, barring it to Farragut's fleet, and several Confederate forts stood guard in the passes of the bayou just west of the Mississippi, the natural route for Federal land forces to march up the river. Grant's army, with Porter's ships, was struggling down the river and Banks' army, with Farragut's fleet, moving up from New Orleans by slow stages. Grant was stopped by the guns of Vicksburg and Banks by the batteries at Port Hudson. Their forces united against either stronghold would speedily fix its doom. Banks decided to sweep away the Confederates in the bayou passes and by so doing open the way for his column to reach the rear of Port Hudson from the west bank, and also reach the Red river country.

The Confederates, under General Dick Taylor, held strong positions on Bayou Teche, at Fort Blisland, and Irish Bend. With two divisions of the Nineteenth corps, under Emory, and Grover, Banks attacked Taylor, moving his troops to the scene by a fleet of river gunboats. Grover's division was to attack the Confederates at Irish Bend and drive them back upon Fort Blisland, which in the meantime Emory would carry by assault. Owing to delay in putting his men ashore in the shallow water of the Teche, Grover did not open the fight until the 14th, when Blisland was already in the hands of Emory.

Emory's force moved against the fort in two columns, marching up both banks of the bayou. A few days before the attack the Confederates had captured the Federal gunboat Diana, which they turned to good service by opening her batteries upon the line of battle. Fortunately for the troops a thirty-two pounder Parrott shot from a gun on shore crashed into the engine room of the daring gun-boat, and she fled up the bayou out of sight. After the retreat of the Diana Emory's men moved steadily on across the plain, both columns keeping abreast. The Confederate works on the right of the bayou terminated in a redoubt, and 500 yards in front of this lay the Third Texas regiment. The Texans fought off the One Hundred and Fifty-sixth New York and held their ground until the Thirty-first Massachusetts dashed to the help of the New Yorkers. The Eighteenth Louisiana and two independent battalions joined the Texans, and a brisk fight ensued over the rifle pits. While the spirited action was taking place on the extreme flank the main line of Federals, led by the Thirty-eighth and Fifty-third Massachusetts, supported by the First Maine battery, marched steadily up to the Confederate works and baited under fire to await a general attack. Meanwhile the column on the left marched forward in the face of a hot fire from the Confederate guns. This fire was kept down in part by Federal guns, but the musketry from a dense canebrake held by the Confederates on the extreme left in advance of the works threatened the destruction of a whole brigade. The Seventy-fifth New York, a regiment seasoned by many bayou fights, dashed into the canebrake, hoping to drive out its occupants and turn the flank of the breastworks in the rear. The brake was covered for two regiments of Texans and Louisianians, who, aided by the guns of two batteries in the works, quickly checked the New Yorkers. Re-enforced by the One Hundred and Fourteenth New York, the Seventy-fifth dashed into the brake, but the canes stood so thick that the enemy could not be seen. While both armies looked on from a distance at this brisk fight in the brake the combatants themselves, enmeshed in the impenetrable tangle, could not see each other when only a few yards apart. The fight ended in the repulse of the New Yorkers, and the day being at an end Banks waited for news of Grover's attack at Irish Bend, before pressing the charge home. Next morning at daybreak the Federal skirmishers rushed forward and found Fort Blisland deserted. Emory marched after the retreating enemy, which led him toward Irish Bend.

Fighting was opened at Irish Bend at daybreak on the 14th by the gunboat fleet accompanying Banks. The boats were the vessels which fought in the same waters under Commander Buchanan a few weeks before, with the exception of the captured Diana, namely, the Clifton, Calhoun, Estrella and Arizona. Under Commander Cooke the Calhoun, Arizona and Estrella lay watching Grover's landing place while the Clifton went up the Teche in chase of the fleeing Diana. It was known that the mighty steam "rain queen" of the West, which had been captured from Colonel Elliot in January, was afloat with a Confederate crew on board and would be heard from in connection with Banks' attack. Sighting her at daylight stealing down the bayou, Cooke formed his line in crescent shape and dashed for the ram, opening a rapid fire as he sailed. It was quick work for the Queen soon burst into flames from the Federal shells and exploded her magazine, ending a most exciting career under two flags.

Taylor's precipitate flight from Fort Blisland on the night of the 13th had been caused by startling news which reached him during the fight with Emory. Grover had landed at Irish Bend, and was marching to cut off his retreat from Fort Blisland. Sending his wagon train, covered by a rear guard, toward Franklin, farther up the bayou, he led two brigades fighting to give his outlying detachments time to get in behind the screen of bayonets he would oppose to the new enemy. Grover began his march early and soon ran upon Taylor's new line, with four guns in position.

Not a moment was lost in pressing the action. Grover sent the One Hundred and Fifty-ninth New York into the thicket to charge the battery. Throwing off their blankets and overcoats, the New Yorkers dashed in their commander, Colonel Edward L. Molineux, falling with a painful wound at the first volley. Just as he shouted the command "Forward!" At the same time Taylor ordered the Twenty-eighth Louisiana to charge Grover's flank. The Louisianians struck the rear of the New Yorkers just as Molineux went down, pouring in a stinging volley, which compelled the regiment to retreat. Simultaneously the whole of Taylor's left bore down upon Grover's right, forcing it back to the Federal guns, which checked the intrepid charge by showers of case shot and canister. Meanwhile Grover's left flank, led by the Thirtieth Connecticut, had charged simultaneously with Molineux, and buried the Confederates right back upon their guns. Grover quickly reorganized his line and, moving forward through the woods, found the enemy massed upon a knoll beyond with four guns bearing upon the gunboats. At the same time the gunboat Diana, which had patched up the holes made by Emory's shells the day before, opened on the line with thirty pounder Parrott shots.

Early in the fight Grover had taken some prisoners, and from their statements he was led to believe that Taylor had brought up all his troops from Fort Blisland and was about to attack with his whole force. He therefore decided to move with caution. But Taylor had given over the command in front to his subordinate, General Mouton, and gone himself to direct the retreat of his army on Franklin.

Mouton soon found himself in a trap. Grover's force outnumbered his own in front, and scouts brought word of another Federal column marching up on his rear. This was Emory's column from Blisland, which had hastened after the retreating Confederates and been led across country and escaped away from the blazing timbers of a bridge, which one of his colleagues had set on fire to prevent the enemy from using it to get into Mouton's rear.

Finding that Taylor did not press the attack, Grover pushed his line forward, but in place of meeting Taylor's line of battle saw Emory's column moving up the bayou. Before retreating the Confederates blew up the Diana, thus disposing of a second captive gunboat.

The chance battle at Irish Bend was more bloody than the attack upon Blisland. The Confederates lost one colonel and two brigadier generals wounded, and Grover lost two colonels and sixteen line officers wounded. The southerners in this fight were trained border men and skilled shots. Like the Boers, they aimed for high game. Colonel Molineux is the veteran whose name has been conspicuous before the public in connection with his son's trial. He recovered from his wound and continued in service.

MASTERS OF MUSIC

BIRTHPLACES OF THE GREAT MAKERS OF MELODY.

Few of Those Genius Has Won the Lasting Admiration of the World Were Born to Affluence—Richard Wagner's Struggle for Fame.

(Special Correspondence.)

Certainly few people realize how humble were the homes, and hard the lives, of many of our most celebrated musicians. It must be remembered that in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the art of music was too great an innovation to be received at once with enthusiasm by the general public; the composers had to work very hard to please their critical audiences, who needed special education before they could appreciate the charms and interpret the meaning of a great musical composition. The soul of music must be alive in the hearts of people before they can understand that it is "a kind of inarticulate, unfathomable speech, which leads us to the edge of the infinite and lets us, for a moment, gaze into that."

The first composer who made any impression on the world was a native of Holland, called Josquin de Prez, who lived in 1450-1521, who taught the first use of the voice in singing, and started vocal music in the principal churches and at the courts of the emperors of his day.

But the greatest composer of the age was Pierling da Palestrina, who was born of very poor parents, about the year 1524, in the town of Palestrina, near Rome. He lived a poor and, at times, precarious life, and labored for years to beautify the church music, with apparently small result.

After Palestrina's death, in 1594, nearly 100 years passed before the birth of another great composer. Then, in the year 1685, two of the most famous musicians were born—Handel and Bach.

At No. 6 Nicholas street, not far from the picturesque market place of Halle, in Saxony, George Frederick Handel was born Feb. 23, and the old house, which is still to be seen, is naturally of great interest. It bears a bust of Handel over the doorway, and wreaths of laurel and carrying ornament the windows.

Sebastian Bach was born into musical surroundings. His ancestors, although hard-working artisans, were all musical, and several gained distinction as composers or organists. Bach's father married the daughter of a furrier, and lived in the beautiful town of Eisenach, in Saxony-Weimar, where their younger son was born. The outside of the cottage bears the following inscription: "E. S. Bach was born on 21 March, 1685, in this house. Restored, 1868." The room, however, in which the musician was born remains unaltered.

Strange to say, although these two powerful masters, Handel and Bach, were contemporaries and of the same age, they neither saw nor even corresponded with each other.

After Bach's death at Leipzig in 1750, the next great musician was Joseph Haydn, who came of very humble birth. His father was a wheelwright and his mother a cook; they lived in a tiny cottage thatched with reeds at Rohrau, close to the river Leitha, which forms the boundary between Austria and Hungary.

The neighborhood is cheerful and wooded, and a small row of cottages lead from the little market square toward the castle of Rohrau. The last cottage bears a tablet with the words, "To Haydn," as its only distinction. On the left side of the door are four small windows, and a little wooden seat; and the front room contains several relics of the great musician, including his portrait on the wall. In this room Joseph Haydn was born in the night of March 31, 1732, the second of fourteen children; and in this humble home he spent the first eight years of his life.

Only once in after years did Haydn return to visit his birthplace, and that was after he had made $2,000 at one London concert alone. He was invited by some friends in Vienna to accompany them to Rohrau, and there he found the old familiar stove where he grew was their youngest child, and was born on Jan. 27, 1766, in the third story of a house in the Getreide Gasse, which is now a most interesting Mozart museum, containing the piano, portraits and manuscripts of the musician.

The next celebrated composer was Beethoven. His parents, who were very poor, lived at Bonn, and Ludwig was born on Dec. 16, 1770, in a garret in the back part of a house in the Bonn Gasse, No. 20. His father held some insignificant musical post in the town, but, being a man of dissipated habits, the family income was very small and the early life of the composer was a rough one.

The house has been bought by several of his admirers, and is now fitted up as a Beethoven museum. It contains numerous portraits of the musician, his family and contemporaries, his piano, quartet instruments, ear trumpets, scores, letters, etc. The Where Bach Was Born. The house into which Beethoven's parents removed after his birth also bears an inscription.

The greater part of Beethoven's life was spent in Vienna, where he died in his 57th year. A monument of him, sitting on a lofty granite pedestal, stands in the Beethoven Platz; and outside the city is a shady park called after the composer, because it was his favorite walk.

The one great composer native to Vienna was Franz Schubert. His grandfather was a Moravian peasant, and his father a parish schoolmaster, and his mother a cook. Franz was the youngest of four children and was born on Jan. 31, 1797, in the district called Lichtenthal, at the house which is now numbered 54 of the Nuessdorfer-Strasse, on the right going out from the city.

Schubert's life was spent principally in his native city in a house not far distant from that of Beethoven. Of worldly prosperity as a result of his genius, Franz Schubert knew little. It is stated that the highest price he ever received for one of his songs was $15, and for some of his best only 25 cents. Moreover, after his death, at the early age of 31, all his possessions were valued at the sum of $10.25. He died less than two years after Beethoven, for whom he had a great admiration, and the graves of the two musicians lie within a few yards of each other.

The birthplace of Richard Wagner, the great dramatic composer, was an old house called the "Red and White Lion," in the north part of the town of Leipzig. His parents were not at all well off, and his father, who was a police magistrate, died shortly after the birth of their ninth child, Richard, which took place on May 22, 1813. In spite of the struggle against poverty which the boy had to face, his perseverance and ambition led him to take his place eventually in the ranks of the great masters.

The immense success and popularity of Wagner's operas in the present day is a striking contrast to the opposition experienced by the composer when they first appeared before the public; indeed, he had considerable difficulty in finding a conductor who would undertake the risk of the performance of his works.

Bride Won Through Cartoons. While Senator Thomas C. Platt of New York was enjoying his recent honeymoon he was approached by a certain Pennsylvania politician of note, and old personal and political friend, who said: "See here, Senator, you won't mind if I say confidentially that you're no raving beauty. Now what I'd like to know is how your wife was ever attracted to such a plain person as you are?"

"I'm glad you asked me," returned the Senator, smiling broadly, "and I'll tell you—in the strictest confidence, of course. She first fell in love with me through seeing the newspaper pictures which the cartoonists make of me. mighty serious mistake when you abolished cartoons—you'll never any of you get married!"—Philadelphia Post.

Is Like Trying to Get Rid of Dandruff Without Herpicide.

Did you ever see any one trying to wash themselves without soap or water?

If you did what would you say of him?

It is every bit as foolish to try to get rid of dandruff and to prevent baldness by feeding the germs which cause it, with Cantharides, Vaseline, Glycerine and similar substances which form the principal ingredients of most so-called Hair Vigors.

Newbro's Herpicide is successful because it attacks and kills the parasitic germ which feeds on the hair roots.

REPUBLICAN CITY CONVENTION

Republican City Convention. Notice is hereby given that a republican city convention will be held at the assembly room in the city hall, in the city of Janesville, Wisconsin, on Saturday, March 13th, 1904, at two o'clock p. m., to nominate candidates to be voted for at the ensuing municipal election, and to elect a city committee, and to transact such other business as may come before said convention. Nominations are to be made for the following officers: City treasurer, city attorney, school commissioner, at large, Justice of the Peace.

The several wards will hold their caucuses on Friday, March 12, 1904, and elect delegates to said convention as follows:

First ward, eight (8).
Second ward, six (6).
Third ward, ten (10).

OUR NEW STORY

Moran of the Lady Letty

BY FRANK NORRIS

Author of "The Pit," "The Octopus," etc.

This is a sea tale, one of romance and adventure. In it you smell the salt air, feel the salt breezes and hear the mysterious voices of the ocean calling you.

In the author's graphic word painting you forget your surroundings and see it all from the deck of the schooner. For example:

"The Bertha Millner fretted and danced and shook her sails, calling impatiently for the wind."

"The cordage sang like harp strings. The schooner's forefoot crashed down into the heaving water with a hissing like that of steam."

"Not once did the Bertha Millner falter in her race. Like an unbitten horse, all restraint shaken off, she ran free toward the ocean as to her pasture land."

"The schooner swept by, shot like an arrow through the swirling currents of the Golden Gate and dipped and bowed and courted to the Pacific that reached toward her his myriad curling fingers."

And Moran, daughter of the vikings, the strangest woman you ever met in fiction—a tenth century character reincarnated.

Intoxicants in Old Days.

Before intoxicating liquor was made dear by taxes and its sale was regulated by license the use of it in England was astonishingly common. Not only were there in London six or seven thousand regular dram shops, but cheap gin was given by masters to their work people instead of wages, sold by barbers and tobacconists, hawked about the streets on barrows by men and women, openly exposed for sale on every market stall, forced on the maid servants and other purchasers at the chandler's shop, until, as one contemporary writer puts it, "one-half of the town seems set up to furnish poison to the other half."

SAYS THE SAGE.

Home-ruly questions keep divorce judges busy.

It is easier to make a bluff than it is to make good.

It's easier to pull your ideals down than it is to live up to them.

A baby is either the storm center or the sunshine of the home.

When a lawyer gives his client unnecessary trouble he always charges for it.

A man meets with a financial reverse when he turns his money the wrong way.

Of course the young spendthrift is a jolly good fellow, but years later he is apt to realize that he's a confounded old fool.

If he lies on the sofa after dinner and slunks the house with his snores, accuse him not of sleeping, for he is merely thinking with his eyes shut.

If he loses his handkerchief everywhere but at home, let him have his own way about it—that the washerwoman is dishonest without your knowing it.

Women's Headaches

542 1-2 Congress Street.
PORTLAND, MAINE, Oct. 17, 1902.

I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pain would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came as a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain.

Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.

Mrs. Wilhelmine Snow
Treasurer, Portland Economic League.

Headaches are the danger signals of coming disease. Both men and women suffer headaches, but periodical headache falls only to the lot of women and is the unerring sign of irregular menstruation and bearing down pains. Completely prostrated by nine months of suppressed menses, blinded by headaches and racked with pain, Mrs. Snow was made a strong and healthy woman again. Remember with Wine of Cardui no case is hopeless because this great remedy cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases and never fails to benefit a case of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. If you are discouraged and doctors have failed, try Wine of Cardui, and try it now. Remember that headaches mean female weakness. Secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui today. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

SPECIAL DISPLAY OF New Waists and Underskirts

Have just received from Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, and have placed on sale their complete sample line of shirt waists, shirt waist suits, wash, saten and moreen underskirts, silk petticoats, and "kimono." The high character of the lines shown by this house are well known and secured as these were at a liberal discount makes an opportunity seldom offered to buy such desirable lines at the beginning of a season. The waists comprise wash waists, white lawn waists, mercerized waists, Jap silk waists, Taffeta and Poauide, silk waists, crepe waists and all over lace waists. Everyone is a new one of this season's make and they represent the styles that will be worn during the coming spring season. The line of underskirts comprises black satens, moreens, silk lustras, wash skirts in stripes, also beautiful silk skirts all on the same basis.

NEW SUITS AND NEW SEPARATE SKIRTS ARE RECEIVING ATTENTION FROM EARLY BUYERS—THE NEW STORE IS WELL PREPARED.

WHITE GOODS

We are now showing a stock second to none that we have ever shown before. There is simply nothing missing that is desirable.

COMPLETE IN EVERY DETAIL

BEAUTIFUL WHITE GOODS FOR WAISTS. The early sale of white waistings last season was so satisfactory that we have largely extended the assortments and you are invited to first choice.

100 Pieces of Mercerized White Goods

many being suitable for whole suits, having body enough to them to launder nicely. Truly a most wonderful assortment of entirely new styles in madras, canvas, satin damask and piques, 15c to 75c.

CLOTH NATIONAL is a canvas weave, 52 inch, shrunk, good weight, just the thing for a suit. Price 75c.

WHITE PIQUE in all grades, plain and fancy, some with a little color for children's wear.

Other White Goods

French Lawns, Persian Lawns, Chiffon Organdic, Dotted Swiss, Dimities all styles, Nainsook 12 1-2c, to 50c, and 6 numbers in Long Cloths, sold largely in 13 yard pieces, 12 1-2c to 25c a yard, less by the piece.

INDIA LINENS, 8c, 10c, 12 1-2c, 15c, 18c, 20c, 25c, 35c.

SEA ISLAND NAINSOOK, 12 yard pieces, in boxes, beautiful qualities.

Many things that we have not space to mention.

WE REPEAT our stock is truly wonderful for completeness.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Saturday, March 12, 1864.—Veterans On Their Return.—The 2nd. Minnesota Regiment passed through our city at an early hour this morning, on their way south.

Going to the Tournament.—As will be observed by the Common Council proceedings of last evening, permission has been granted to Water Witch Casino Co., No. 2, to take their apparatus to Fond du Lac next summer, to compete for the prizes offered by the Wisconsin Firemen's Association at the tournament to be held in that city. This wide-awake company is always on hand for duty at a fire, or where there is any fun, and if at Fond du Lac they fail to win a prize we are no prophet.

The New York Times' correspondent who accompanied Kilpatrick's raid to Richmond says the rebels have evidently obtained a new supply of railroad iron since last year. He was with Stoneman last year and says these roads were then nearly worn out. New tracks have since been laid.

The federal authorities have recently confiscated the property of the following rebels, situated at Superior, Wis.: R. M. T. Hunter, R. Ould, Wm. Alken, Samuel Magoffin, W. W. Boyce, John McQueen, W. W. Cochrane and S. M. Flourney.

Golfing Plans.

Old Time Popularity of Scotch Game Returning—Travis and Others.

The plans of the golfers for the coming season are being made with a rush that is indicative of a return to the old time activity in the game. Although there was plenty to keep golfers busy last year, it was very noticeable that the number of open and invitation tournaments was not so great as had formerly been the case. Interest in the game among the women also showed a marked falling off. Whether the revival of tennis had anything to do with this temporary condition of affairs or not it is hard to say, for while many golf clubs added tennis courts to their attractions, others manifested but little interest in the latter game. At the Morris County (N. J.) Golf club, for instance, where the women players have formerly been noted for their loyalty to golf, more attention was given to tennis.

The fact is becoming more apparent that the well organized golf clubs are rapidly becoming country clubs, whether in name or not. Many indeed have dropped the name "golf" and substituted that of "country club." Originally formed, as most of the clubs in question were, by golf enthusiasts, the fondness for open-air sports has brought in a large number of other members, who prefer to join the established club rather than organize a new one for some special sport. In this way the parent club becomes a strong body financially and is enabled much better than small special clubs would be to encourage other sports. A golf club is eminently fitted to do this, for there is always an abundance of land, and the only expense necessary is in the hiring of an extra man or two and laying out the tennis courts. In larger clubs bowling and other indoor sports have been added, and many of the local clubs do not assume to be pretensions now keep open all the year, often holding, as at Baltusrol, Morristown, N. J., squash, billiard and pool tournaments. It was perfectly natural, therefore, in the growing tendency to make country clubs out of the regular golf clubs that special interest should be shown by members in the new sports that were added. The membership in all of the successful clubs now being so well divided affords opportunities for all classes to enjoy their specialties without encroaching upon the domain of others.

It is barely possible that Walter J. Travis, the amateur champion, who is now playing with his usual success at Palm Beach, Fla., may not be seen in the open championship this year. The dates for the latter event have just been fixed for July 8 and 9. The event will be played at the Glenview Golf club, near Chicago, and it is generally understood that the open champion shall enter the event. Travis, however, is contemplating another European trip, to meet the Troops are now moving to the front in Grant's department in very large numbers. During one day nearly four thousand re-enlisted veterans passed through Louisville for the south, to say nothing of new recruits, convalescent soldiers, etc., who were forwarded to the army.

Janesville Daily Gazette.—This paper comes to us again after a resting spell of nearly two months. We failed to recognize it. There was such a look of life, freshness and intelligence about it that nearly half a day passed before we could realize that it was the Gazette. On looking the paper over, we found new type and several indications of prosperity, gratifying to witness. Verily there has been life come out of Janesville, and there is spice and originality in the Daily Gazette.—La Crosse Democrat.

Resignation of Ald. Strong.—As will be seen by the council proceedings, Ald. Strong has resigned his position, to take effect on the 19th. He has been an efficient member of the council, performing the duties with promptness and intelligence. We believe his name has been as seldom found among the absentees as any member of the council. He resigns because of the press of other duties connected with his office as General agent of the M. & P. du C. R. R. company.

English and Scotch golfers. He will probably go, according to present plans, toward the end of March, and besides playing in a number of tournaments he expects to enter the amateur championship of Great Britain, which will be held in May on the Sandwich golf course in the south of England. This will be the first time that an American champion has ever attempted to enter the foreign championship, and whatever the outcome it will be a notable feature in the year's golf annals. Travis is playing in excellent form now, and his entry in the classic golf event of Great Britain will serve to show the relative standing of the best of our players with the crack golfers abroad.

Travis is not likely to be the only American in that tournament, for E. M. Byers and F. Oden Horstmann, both prominent golfers, are going abroad early this spring, and their intention is to enter the amateur championship. Byers is a Pittsburg player, and he was runner up in the amateur championship in 1902 to Louis James of Chicago. As a Yale golfer he won many tournaments, and he was also runner up in the amateur championship at Nassau last fall. Horstmann is a Washington player and has taken part, with average success, in many local contests. Besides golfing the travelers expect to make an automobile tour through a large part of Great Britain.

ONE WORD IN TIME

Is Better Than Two Afterwards. A Chance to Profit By a Janesville Man's Experience.

It is a strange thing how people will put away an opportunity until too late. It is only little things that go to make up our every day existence; the trouble is we don't pay sufficient attention to them. Backache is a little thing. Sometimes it comes after a hard day's work or a slight cold. It will pass off, you say; it's only the result of overtaxing my back, but your kidneys. The exertion or straining has interfered with their delicate mechanism. You call it backache, but it really is kidney ache. If the kidneys are not relieved, chronic disorders set in and this is where the "little thing" should not be passed over. A Janesville man has learned to appreciate what delay means.

Mr. H. W. Rodgers, carpenter of 210 South Main street says "My wife had kidney complaint and rheumatism for five years suffering a great deal from pain across the loins. Doan's Kidney Pills, sold by the People's Drug Co., brought much longed for and gratifying results. First there was no visible change and she came to the conclusion that they were like all other remedies she had tried but finally the aching and the distress in the small of the back disappeared."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for U. S. Remember the name Doan's or take no other.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, Bright's, catarrh of the bladder and other forms of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The best thing to put by for a rainy day is good health.

CRITICISM OF ENGLAND.

One should never spoil a good theory by explaining it.

This country is full of people who are starving up to their positions.

Let me make the jokes of the empire; I care not who makes its blunders.

In order to carry on an argument you must descend to the other man's level.

The cuckoo of philosophy has successfully laid her egg in the nest of theology.

London is overcrowded with serf-minded people who stand in awe of their own ignorance.

An Englishman's social standing seems to depend on the number of people he can afford to despise.

The average Englishman has so deep a reverence for antiquity that he would rather be wrong than be recent.

London is full of clever people who expect to get salvation in a moment and spread the luxury of being damned over a lifetime.

BRIEF TRAILERS.

Youth is foolish from ignorance, age from habit.

There are many worse mothers than Dame Nature.

In the mirror of memory everything is exaggerated.

In the race of life each is his own heaviest handicap.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

From L. H. Andrews, of Richmond, Virginia, one of the Fathers of the city—a prominent business man, a leader of public spirit, widely known and highly respected—comes this THIRD letter—telling how Paine's Celery Compound—the discovery of Dartmouth's great physician—has never failed him when he turned to it for new vitality, new health and for safety against all sickness.

Mr. Andrews was cured of:

Exhaustion, Stomach and Bowel Trouble, Weak Appetite, Chills, Rheumatism, Sleeplessness, "Worn Out" Feeling.

Letter No. 3.

"Some years ago, as you know, I used Paine's Celery Compound with highly gratifying results. Business cares and worry had really 'knocked me out.' Stomach and bowels in bad condition—with chills and several spells of rheumatism—had made life a burden to me.

"For eight or nine months I suffered this way and was under treatment by two good physicians, but they failed to relieve me permanently.

"On the advice of a friend I tried Paine's Celery Compound. My appetite returned, the chills ceased, I could sleep well, and the 'worn out' feeling disappeared entirely.

MR. L. H. ANDREWS—RICHMOND.

"My friends noticed the rapid improvement and were much surprised, for, (as I have since learned) they thought my days were numbered. "Since then whenever that old tired feeling came on I would take another bottle or two, always with the same happy result. I enjoy splendid health.

"I have never lost an opportunity to speak a good word for the remedy that proved such a panacea. Simply as a cure for debility and insomnia—to say nothing of other troubles it will remove—I consider that Paine's Celery Compound is nothing short of a blessing.

"I will take pleasure in replying to any inquiries as to a stamp is enclosed. Very truly yours, L. H. ANDREWS, 285 N. 29th St., Richmond, Va., Dec. 10.

CHAPTER I.

THIS is to be a story of a battle, at least one murder and several sudden deaths. For that reason it begins with a pink tea and among the mingled odors of many delicate perfumes and the hale, frank smell of Caroline Testout roses.

There had been a great number of debutantes "coming out" that season in San Francisco by means of afternoon teas, pink, lavender and otherwise. This particular tea was well intended to celebrate the fact that Josie Herrick had arrived at that time of her life when she was to wear her hair high and her gowns long and to have a "day" of her own quite distinct from that of her mother.

Ross Wilbur presented himself at the Herrick house on Pacific avenue much too early upon the afternoon of Miss Herrick's tea. As he made his way up the canvased stairs he was aware of a terrifying array of millinery and a disquieting staccato chatter of fountain voices in the parlors and reception rooms on either side of the hallway. A single high hat in the room that had been set apart for the men's use confirmed him in his suspicions.

"Might have known it would be a hen party till 8 anyhow," he muttered, swinging out of his overcoat. "But I don't know one girl in twenty down there now—all mamma's friends at this hour, and papa's maiden sisters, and Jo's schoolteachers and governesses and music teachers, and I don't know what all."

When he went down he found it precisely as he expected. He went up to Miss Herrick, where she stood receiving with her mother and two of the other girls, and allowed them to chaff him on his forlornness.

"Maybe I seem at my ease," said Ross Wilbur to them, "but really I am very much frightened. I'm going to run away as soon as it is decently possible, even before, unless you feed me."

"I believe you had luncheon not two hours ago," said Miss Herrick. "Come along, though, and I'll give you some chocolate and perhaps, if you're good, a stuffed olive. I got them just because I knew you liked them. I ought to stay here and receive, so I can't look after you for long."

The two fought their way through the crowded rooms to the luncheon table, and Miss Herrick got Wilbur his chocolate and his stuffed olives. They sat down and talked in a window recess for a moment, Wilbur toying in an absurd fashion as he tried to make a lap for his plate.

"I thought," said Miss Herrick, "that you were going on the Ridgeways' yachting party this afternoon. Mrs. Ridgeway said she was counting on you. They were going out with the Petrel."

"She didn't count above a hundred, though," answered Wilbur. "I got your bid first, so I regretted the yachting party, and I guess I've regretted it anyhow." And he grinned at her over his cup.

"Nice man," she said, adding on the instant, "I must go now, Ross."

"Wait till I eat the sugar out of my cup," complained Wilbur. "Tell me," he added, scrapping vigorously at the bottom of the cup with the inadequate spoon—"tell me—you're going to the head-down tonight?"

"If you mean the assembly—yes, I am."

"Will you give me the first and last?"

"I'll give you the first, and you can ask for the last then."

"Let's put it down. I know you'll forget it." Wilbur drew a couple of cards from his case.

"Programmes are not good form any more," said Miss Herrick.

"Forgetting a dance is worse."

He made out the cards, writing on the one he kept for himself, "First waltz—Jo."

"I must go back now," said Miss Herrick, getting up.

"In that case I shall run. I'm afraid of girls."

"It's a pity about you!"

"I am. One girl, I don't say, but girl in the aggregate, like this," and he pointed his chin toward the thronged parlors. "It unnerves me."

"Goodby, then!"

"Goodby until tonight about—"

"About 9."

"About 9, then."

Ross Wilbur made his adieu to Mrs. Herrick and the girls who were receiving and took himself away. As he came out of the house and stood for a moment on the steps, settling his hat gingerly upon his hair so as not to disturb the parting, he was not by any means an ill looking chap. His good height was helped out by his long coat and his high silk hat, and there was plenty of jaw in the lower part of his face. Nor was his taller altogether answerable for his shoulders. Three years before this time Ross Wilbur had pulled at No. 5 in his varsity boat in an eastern college that was not accustomed to athletic discomfiture.

"I wonder what I'm going to do with myself until supper time," he muttered as he came down the steps, feeling for the middle of his stick. He found no immediate answer to his question. But the afternoon was fine, and he set off to walk in the direction of the town, with a half formed idea of looking in at his club.

At his club he found a letter in his box from his particular chum, who had been spending a month shooting elk in Oregon. It read:

Dear Old Man—Will be back on the afternoon you receive this. Will hit the town on the 2 o'clock boat. Get sent for the best show going—my treat—and arrange to assimilate nutriment at the Foodle Dog—also mine. I've got miles of talk in me that I've got to reel off before midnight. Yours, "FIDLY."

I've got a stand of horns for you, Ross, that are glory hallelujah.

"Well, I can't go," murmured Wilbur as he remembered the assembly that was to come off that night and his engaged dance with Jo Herrick. He decided that it would be best to meet Jerry as he came off the boat and tell him how matters stood. Then he resolved, since no one that he knew was in the club and the installment of the Paris weeklies had not arrived, that it would be amusing to go down to the water front and loaf among the shipping until it was time for Jerry's boat.

Wilbur spent an hour along the wharfs, watching the great grain ships consigned to "Cork for orders" slowly disgorging themselves with whole harvests of wheat from the San Joaquin valley; lumber vessels for Durban and South African ports settling lower and lower to the water's level as forests of pine and redwood stratified themselves along their decks and in their holds; coal barges discharging from Nantamo; busy little tugs coughing and nuzzling at the flanks of deep sea trumps, while hay barges and Italian white-halls came and went at every turn. A Stockton river boat, vent by, her stern wheel churning along behind like a huge net reel; a tiny maelstrom of activity centered about an Alaska commercial company's steamboat that would clear for Dawson in the morning.

No quarter of one of the most picturesque cities in the world had more interest for Wilbur than the water front. In the mile or so of shipping that stretched from the docks where the China steamships landed down past the ferry slips and on to Meigs' wharf every maritime nation in the world was represented. More than once Wilbur had talked to the loungers of the wharfs, stowed out of work, sailors between voyages, calkers and ship chandlers' men looking—not too earnestly—for jobs, so that on this occasion when a little, undersized fellow in dirty brown sweater and clothes of Barbary coast cut asked him for a match to light his pipe Wilbur offered a cigar and passed the time of day with him. Wilbur had not forgotten that he himself was dressed for an afternoon function. But the incongruity of the business was precisely what most amused him.

After a time the fellow suggested drinks. Wilbur hesitated for a moment. It would be something to tell about, however, so, "All right, I'll drink with you," he said.

The brown sweater led the way, to a sailors' boarding house hard by. The rear of the place was built upon piles over the water, but in front on the ground floor was a barroom.

"Hum an' gum," announced the brown sweater as the two came in and took their places at the bar.

"Hum an' gum; Tuck. Wattle you have, sir?"

"Oh, I don't know," hesitated Wilbur. "Give me a mild Manhattan."

While the drinks were being mixed the brown sweater called Wilbur's attention to a fighting headress from the Marquesas that was hung on the wall over the free lunch counter and opposite the bar. Wilbur turned about to look at it and remained so, his back to the barkeeper, till the latter told them their drinks were ready.

"Well, mate, here's big blocks an' taut hawse pipes," said the brown sweater cordially.

"Your very good health," returned Wilbur.

The brown sweater wiped a thin mustache in the hollow of his palm and wiped that palm upon his trousers leg.

"Yes, sir," he continued, once more facing the Marquesas headress. "Yes, sir; they're queer game down there."

"In the Marquesas Islands, you mean?" said Wilbur.

"Yes, sir, they're queer game. When they ain't tattooed themselves with Scripture text's they gift from the missionaries, they're pulling out the hairs all over their bodies with two clum shells. Hair by hair, you understand."

"Pull'n out 'er hair?" said Wilbur, wondering what was the matter with his tongue.

"I got your bid first."

"They think it's clever—think the women folk like it."

Wilbur had fancied that the little man had worn a brown sweater when they first met. But now, strangely enough, he was not in the least surprised to see it iridescent, like a pigeon's breast.

"I've been down that way?" inquired the little man next.

Wilbur heard the words distinctly enough, but somehow they refused to fit into the right places in his brain. He pulled himself together, frowning heavily.

"What—did—you—say?" he asked with great deliberation, biting off his words. Then he noticed that he and his companion were no longer in the barroom, but in a little room back of it. His personality divided itself. There was one Ross Wilbur, who could not make his hands go where he wanted them, who said one word when he thought another and whose legs below the knee were made of solid lead; then there was another Ross Wilbur—Ross Wilbur the alert, who was perfectly clear headed and who stood off to one side and watched his twin brother making a monkey of himself, without power and without even the desire of helping him.

This latter Wilbur heard the iridescent sweater say:

"Bust me, if y' ain't squiffy, old man. Stand by a bit, an' we'll have a ball."

"Can't have got—return—exceptionally—and the round table—pull out hairs w' to channel's," gabbled Wilbur's stupefied double, and Wilbur the alert said to himself: "You're not drunk, Ross Wilbur; that's certain. What could they have put in your cocktail?"

The iridescent sweater stamped twice upon the floor, and a trapdoor fell away beneath Wilbur's feet like the drop of a gallows. With the eyes of his undrugged self Wilbur had a glimpse of water below. His elbow struck the floor as he went down, and he fell feet first into a whitehall boat. He had time to observe two men at the oars and to look between the piles that supported the house above him and catch a glimpse of the bay and a glint of the Contra Costa shore. He was not in the least surprised at what had happened and made up his mind that it would be a good idea to lie down in the boat and go to sleep.

Suddenly, but how long after his advent into the boat he could not tell, his wits began to return and settle themselves like wild birds flocking again after a scare. Swiftly he took in the scene.

The blue waters of the bay around him, the deck of a schooner on which he stood, the whitehall boat alongside and an enormous man with a face like a setting moon wrangling with his friend in the sweater, no longer iridescent.

"What do you call it?" shouted the red man. "I want able seamen. I don't digger on working this boat with dancing masters, do I? We ain't exactly doing quadrilles on my quarter deck. If we don't look out, we'll step on this thing and break it. It ain't ought to be let around loose without its man."

"Rot that!" vociferated the brown sweater. "I tell you he's one of the best sailor men on the front. If he ain't, we'll forfeit the money. Come on, Captain Kitchell; we made show enough gettin' away as it was, and this daytime, business ain't our line. D'you sign or not? Here's the advance note. I got to duck my nut or I'll have the patrol boat after me."

"I'll sign this once," growled the other, scriawling his name on the note, "but if this swab ain't up to sample he'll come back by freight, an' I'll drop in on me dear friend Jim when we come back and give him a reel nice time, an' you can lay to that, Billy Trim." The brown sweater pocketed the note, went over the side and rowed off.

Wilbur stood in the waist of a schooner anchored in the stream well off Fisherman's wharf. In the forward part of the schooner a Chinaman in brown duck was mixing paint. Wilbur was conscious that he still wore his high hat and long coat, but his stick was gone and one gripy glove was slung to the button. In front of him towered the enormous red faced man. A pungent reek of some kind of rancid fat or oil assailed his nostrils. Over by Alcatraz a ferryboat whistled for its slip as it elbowed its way through the water.

Wilbur had himself fairly in hand by now. His wits were all about him, but the situation was beyond him as yet.

"Git f'rd," commanded the big man. Wilbur drew himself up, angry in an instant. "Look here," he began, "what's the meaning of this business? I know I've been dragged and mislaid. I demand to be put ashore. Do you understand that?"

"Angel child," whimpered the big man. "Oh, you lilce of the vallee, you bright an' mornin' star! I'm reely pained, y' know, that your yally can't come along, but we'll have your piano set up in the lazarette. It gives me genuine grief, it do, to see you bel'n' obliged to put your lilce white feet on this here vulgar an' dirtree deck. We'll have the Wilton carpet down by tomorrow, so we will, my dear. Yab-h!" he suddenly broke out as his rage boiled over. "Git f'rd, d'ye hear? I'm captain of this here battibut, an' that's all you need to know for a good while to come. I ain't generally got to tell that to a man but once, but I'll stretch the point just for love of you, angel child. Now, then, move!"

Wilbur stood motionless, puzzled beyond expression. No experience he had ever been through helped in this situation.

"Look here," he began, "I—"

The captain knocked him down with a blow of one enormous fist upon the mouth, and while he was yet stretched upon the deck kicked him savagely in the stomach. Then he allowed him to rise, caught him by the neck and the slack of his overcoat and ran him forward to where a hatchway not two feet across opened in the deck. Without ado he flung him down into the darkness below, and while Wilbur, dis-

There's nothing better than Scott's Emulsion after the grip. When the fever is gone the body is left weak and exhausted; the nervous system is completely run down and vitality is low.

ried by the fall, sat on the floor at one foot of the vertical companion ladder, gazing about him with distended eyes, there rained down upon his head first an oilskin coat, then a sou'wester, a pair of oilskin breeches, woolen socks and a plug of tobacco. Above him, down the contracted square of the hatch, came the bellowing of the captain's voice:

"There's you fit out, Mister Lilee of the Vallee, which the same our dear friend Jim makes a present of and no charge, because he loves you so. You're allowed two minutes to change, an' it is to be hoped as how you won't force me to come for to assist."

It would have been interesting to have followed, step by step, the mental process that now took place in Ross Wilbur's brain. The captain had given him two minutes in which to change. The time was short enough, but even at that Wilbur changed more than his clothes during the two minutes he was left to himself in the reeking dark of the schooner's fo'c'st'le. It was more than a change—it was a revolution. What he made up his mind to do, precisely what mental attitude he decided to adopt, just what new niche he elected wherein to set his feet, it is difficult to say. Only by results could the change be guessed at. He went down the forward hatch at the toe of Kitchell's boot—silk hatted, melton overcoat, patent booted and gloved in suedes. Two minutes later there emerged upon the deck a figure in oilskins and a sou'wester. There was blood upon the face of him and the grime of an unclean ship upon his bare hands. It was Wilbur, and yet not Wilbur. In two minutes he had been, in a way, born again. The only traces of his former self were the patent leather boots, still persistent in their gloss and shine, that showed with grim incongruity below the vast compass of the oilskin breeches.

As Wilbur came on deck he saw the crew of the schooner hurrying forward, six of them, Chinamen every one, in brown jeans and black felt hats. On the quarter deck stood the captain barking his orders.

"Consider the Lilee of the Vallee," bellowed the latter as his eye fell upon Wilbur transformed. "Clap on to that starboard windlass brake, sonny."

Wilbur saw the Chinamen ranging themselves about what he guessed was the windlass in the schooner's bow. He followed and took his place among them, grasping one of the bars.

"Break down!" came the next order. Wilbur and the Chinamen obeyed, bearing up and down upon the bars till the slack of the anchor chain came home and stretched taut and dripping from the hawse holes.

"Yast heavin!"

And then as Wilbur released the brake and turned about for the next order he cast his glance out upon the bay, and there, not 150 yards away, her spotless sails tense, her cordage humming, her immaculate flanks slipping easily through the waves, the water hissing and churning under her forefoot, clean, gleaming, dainty and aristocratic, the Ridgeways' yacht Petrel passed like a thing of life. Wilbur saw Nat Ridgeway himself at the wheel. Girls in smart gowns and young fellows in white ducks and yachting caps—all friends of his—crowded the deck. A little orchestra of musicians were reeling off a quick step.

The popping of a cork and a gale of talk and laughter came to his ears. Wilbur stared at the picture, his face devoid of expression. The Petrel came on, drew nearer, was not a hundred feet away from the schooner's stern. A strong swimmer, such as Wilbur, could cover the distance in a few strokes. Two minutes ago Wilbur might have—

"Set your mains!" came the bellow of Captain Kitchell. "Clap on to your throat and peak ballyards!"

The Chinamen hurried at Wilbur followed.

A trapdoor fell away beneath Wilbur's feet.

War In "Forrest's Country"

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

February 11-22, 1864

(Copyright, 1903, by G. L. Kilmer.)

Early in January, 1864, the redoubtable Forrest rode out of the Federal lines in west Tennessee, bringing to the Confederate camps in northern Mississippi his most welcome sheaves of raw recruits for the swiftly vanishing ranks of the Confederate army. This feat had been accomplished almost under the eyes of Sherman, who held a division of troops under arms at Memphis, within a day's march of the scene of some of Forrest's exploits, and was personally on the way down the Mississippi to marshal forces and eliminate Forrest from the war problem in the west. But Forrest as a problem got no smaller day by day in spite of Sherman's plans to eliminate.

As a reward for his grand coup in west Tennessee Forrest was at once promoted to the command of an army and placed at the head of a Confederate department comprising east Tennessee and northern Mississippi. It is true that Sherman had already pre-empted large slices of this territory and was trying to hold it down with two divisions of infantry and large detachments of roaming cavalry. The Confederate government officially named the district "Forrest's cavalry department," but Sherman's own people, wrought upon by the logic of facts, dubbed it "Forrest's country."

The "Wizard of the Saddle" recognized Sherman's rights of pre-emption not at all. While he was busy licking his raw recruits into shape for business, refitting his battalions and concentrating his active scouts brought word that Sherman had struck out from Vicksburg eastward with a large body of infantry and was marching toward Meridian to establish a base for future operations in holding the country down. At the same time a large column of bluecoated cavalry rode out from Memphis, also heading for Meridian. To the "Wizard" this combined movement of his enemies looked like a plan to slice his country up piecemeal, cut, slash and burn things until a crow couldn't subsist there, much more his hungry eyed troopers. As usual, Forrest was correct as to the enemy's plan; for the rest, he could look to that.

The blue cavalry column from the north had the longest trot to take, and Forrest kindly volunteered to guide it to its faraway goal—that is, he stretched his battalions across its route in northern Mississippi, put on a bold front and gradually retired, leaving the foe to imagine he was driving Forrest out. Forrest in person led the right wing of his corps, and his celebrated subchief, General Chalmers, the left wing. A wide interval between the wings was covered by the brigade of Colonel Jeffrey Forrest, brother of the "Wizard" and every inch a fighter. The column maintained a line of fleet couriers all the way from Chalmers on the left to Forrest on the right, so the wary chieftain never slept without knowing just what the enemy was doing, whether he was being guided into the road Forrest wanted him to take, and details like that.

The Federal cavalry was commanded by General William Sooy Smith. As the plan was to sweep the country clean of Confederates and leave it desolate, the column marched on separate roads, making Forrest's game easy. If a detachment of bluecoats took the wrong road in Forrest's notion he got up a fight and retreated, drawing the enemy pell-mell at his heels in the proper direction. Smith entered Mississippi Feb. 11 and at the end of a week was drawing near West Point, in the angle lying between the Tombigbee on the east of the route and the Oka-tibby-ha, which flows southeast into the Tombigbee below West Point. This angle grew narrower each hour of the southward march and the streams on each side grew deeper, swollen as they were with recent rains. It was a trap into which the wily Forrest was leading the enemy. South of the junction of the two streams Forrest had 3,000 cavalry under General S. D. Lee moving north to join forces in case the enemy could be held for pitched battle. Smith patrolled the Tombigbee in search of forryboats to get his army across the river into the freer country east of it, but Forrest's scouts and citizen allies took care that there were no boats in sight for the enemy. Smith's trail was marked by a line of fire from burning corn and cotton, and the sight in no wise cooled the fighting ardor of the Confederates. As the column drew near West Point Colonel Jeffrey Forrest played along the front, receding slowly and refusing pitched battles. The Federals had closed up and were massed in a force too strong for Forrest had he chosen to fight without waiting for reinforcements. Reluctantly he massed his own corps behind a creek four miles back of West Point and allowed his brother's brigade to be driven from the town with a flourish of trumpets by the Federals.

General Smith looked the ground over where Forrest was in position. It appeared like a big contract to dislodge the Confederates, and the Federal leader decided to make a feint along the front and take the back track for Memphis. One bridge was standing on the Oka-tibby-ha south of the town, and this Forrest jealously guarded against persistent attacks of the enemy. Meanwhile Forrest had sent the brigade of General Barbeau to the east bank of the Tombigbee to watch the Federals and strike across to his rear at the first opportunity. After a desperate snort at the bridge about noon the 21st of February the Federals hurried away northward. Forrest followed with his escort and, learning from personal observation that the Federals were retreating, pushed his whole force after them on the road to Okolona.

About four miles north of West Point Forrest overtook Smith's rear guard and, driving it from a strong position in the timber, followed closely for five miles. Here the Federals formed across a lane where the ground did not admit of turning by the pursuers. Eagerly a force of 150 troopers in gray dashed down the lane, but were met by a countercharge and would have been destroyed but for the readiness of Forrest himself, who led the rescue and in a pistol duel with a Federal trooper shot his antagonist dead.

Forrest used the same tactics in the pursuit of his fleeing foe that he had in meeting their advance. He avoided battle, but sent his brigadiers around the flanks of the pursuing column to harass the Federal march and, if possible, cut off their retreat. At Okolona battle seemed imminent for a time, for Barbeau's brigade had landed squarely in the new Federal front, and Forrest, with two brigades, came thundering on in the rear. There were two roads northward from Okolona, one of them held by Barbeau, and Colonel Forrest attempted to reach the other, leading to Pototoc. The night of the 21st was very dark, and the pursuers were baffled in their attempts to force the hand of the enemy. Colonel Forrest failed to get the Pototoc road, and the Federal rear guard selected a position a few miles north of Okolona to make a stand. On a knoll covered with small oaks they had thrown up obstructions, which could not be reached by pursuers except by crossing a marsh and climbing a slope under fire. Settled by his failure to seize the Pototoc road, Colonel Jeffrey Forrest deployed his Mississippians, Alabamians and Tennesseans and led them in a terrific onset, which carried the first Federal line of cover in the face of a withering fire.

The Federal brigade of Colonel George E. Waring received the attack of Colonel Forrest, fighting under the eye of General Smith. This brigade comprised the Second New Jersey, Second Illinois and Fourth Missouri cavalry. The Missourians had along a battery which was in action for the first time. The troopers carried breechloaders, and Colonel Forrest's dash for the second line was met with a withering fire concentrated upon a narrow front.

The gallant Forrest went down, struck, as his enemies claimed, by a shot from the young battery. The charging line was repulsed and carried to the rear its dying leader. Word was taken to General Forrest in a distant part of the field, and he hurried to his brother's side, dismounted and took the boy in his arms for a parting embrace. As the stricken soldier was in the very throes of death, Forrest clung to him, and meantime the fighting line, moved to sympathy with the pathetic scene, ceased firing. When the boy had breathed his last Forrest laid him gently down and, conscious that the battle had been delayed by this unwonted show of grief in a war leader, nervously leaped into his saddle and drew his sword. Motioning his staff and escort to form, facing Waring's stubborn line, he shouted to his corps bugler, always by the side of his chief in action, "Gaus, sound the charge!"

Forrest led his brother's brigade in a mad rush over the breastworks of logs and rails, where Smith's rear guard battled with ferocious equality that of the assailants. His horse fell under him, pierced with five bullets, but he pressed forward on foot until a trooper offered him his horse. This was also killed before the impetuous fighter had ridden thirty rods. Two Confederate colonels fell, and Forrest was soon left with only 300 men, and these had used up their carbine ammunition and were fighting with pistols, hand to hand.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

and an educational institution should be judged by the quality of its past work. Any school that shrinks from a thorough inspection of its educational or business methods is open to suspicion, that it is not what it should be. The following indorsement of our work in Stoughton speaks for itself:

ENDORSEMENT

We, the under signed business and professional men of the City of Stoughton, Wis., learn with regret, that Messrs. Dale & Gough, Proprietors of the Stoughton Business College, owing to the increasing demand for their graduates, have decided to move their institution to the city of Janesville. The high class work done in the College here and the success of all graduates enables us to unhesitatingly recommend these gentlemen and their institution to the business public, as well as to all young people of Janesville and vicinity, desiring to obtain a first-class commercial training.

LIVES DEARER THAN OUR VERY OWN

How many lives dearer to us than our very own have been placed in needless jeopardy by failure to provide against and forestall the great suffering which too frequently accompanies and follows the bearing of children? That we would do anything within our power to obviate the possibility of such an happening is too patent to admit of question; therefore mark well this fact—a liniment, by name, has been devised, whose function it is to prepare in advance the muscles and tissues intimately associated with parturition.

This liniment is for external application. By its use the parts are relaxed and enabled to withstand not only the actual strain brought on by bearing on them during accouchement, but also to rally from this ordeal and speedily regain their normal proportions and tonicity. It is not irritating to the most sensitive surfaces, and is applicable to all cases. It is not enough to call it Mother's Friend—it is the friend of the whole family. $1.00, all druggists. E. H. Sothern in "The Proud Prince."

E. H. Sothern's impersonation of Robert of Sicily in his new production of Justin Huntly McCarthy's "The Proud Prince," at Myers Grand next Wednesday evening is the all absorbing dramatic event.

As proud king and grotesque court fool, Mr. Sothern has the most impressive role in which he has ever appeared. The legend of the pride, punishment and suffering of King Robert has long been a favorite with poet and clergy since Leigh Hunt first popularized the story from Sicilian folk lore and Longfellow converted his sublime verse. It pictures the vengeance of Heaven upon an ignominious tyrant who, through a miraculous intervention, is changed from his proud state into the being of his own court jester. In this condition he gave such an elaborate setting, allow picturesque and artistic environment. McCarthy has treated his subject in the same manner in which he did his former play, "The Proud Prince," however, goes to a greater depth of thought, as it incorporates, besides its romantic element, the religious, the mystic and the supernatural. The religious element enters into the piece in the appearance of the archangel, the miracle of the transformation, the chanting of the monks, the singing of the choir and the appearance of mediæval church potentates. The supernatural element of the play gives Mr. Sothern unusual opportunity for weird electrical effects and the picturesque period for brilliant pictures.

A large organization is employed by Mr. Sothern to interpret the play. One hundred and fifty people will be learns humility, becomes ergobled, wins the forgiveness of Heaven and enters into his former powers and kingly appearance again.

In Mr. McCarthy's play the story of the legend is followed. The proud King, while at the height of his arrogance, is metamorphosed through the appearance of an archangel into the body of his court fool. A love theme, however, is interwoven and acts as the play's moving spirit. The adventures of the disguised king in trying to shield the daughter of the public executioner, whom he has learned to love, through scenes of peril, form the action of the play.

Students of the drama declare that Mr. Sothern has given to his presentation of this exalted theme the most impressive and important production the American stage has seen in many years. It is by far the most elaborate with which Mr. Sothern has ever been connected. He has endeavored throughout to follow the ponderous thought manifested in the legend and in his own impersonation of the role seen upon the stage, and the moving pictures of life and action, for which Mr. Sothern's productions are always noted. Musical embellishments play an important adjunct, fifty-two numbers composed for the production follow the spirit of the play. There are twenty-seven speaking roles in the piece. Miss Cecelia Loftis appears in the leading feminine role. Rowland Buckstone, Mary Hall, William Harris, John Findlay, Percival T. Moore, Sydney C. Mather, Malcolm Bradley, Ethel Howard, Jane Evans and many others are in Mr. Sothern's support.

"The Heart of Maryland." The most successful play of the score or more dramatic offerings of David Belasco, "The Heart of Maryland," which is now in its seventh season of great and deservedly popular endorsement, is announced for Friday, March 18, at the Myers Grand. "The Heart of Maryland" season after season has more than maintained its position as one of the leading play to the end of the conflict which brings to her the triumph, honor and freedom of her lover and the redemption of a lasting peace to her country. The characters are numerous, strongly individualized and portrayed by a competent, evenly balanced company of prominent players, and the scenic illustrations are picturesque and effective in their realism.

William F. Walcott, B. J. Murphy, Clifford Storch, Oscar Norfleet, John M. Stevens, Robert McIntyre, Francis Charlton, Edwin L. Hennison, Florence Foster, Nell McEwen, Florence Rossland, and Eulalia Bennett, play the principal roles this season.

ALLEN GROVE. Allen Grove, March 11.—Mr. Wm. Sharp left for Milwaukee where he expects to find employment. The rumor is that Chas. Langdon has bought the late James Wilkins residence. We are right.

Mr. Henry Carter left Tuesday morning for a week's visit among Antigo and Green Bay friends.

A party was given last Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Flake in honor of August Huenning. A large crowd attended and a good time was had by all.

Mr. Geo. Clapper of Clinton spent Sunday with his sister and family, Mrs. Jack Sweet.

Quite a number from here attended the lunch and pit party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Switzer last Wednesday evening. Refreshments were served and the merry crowd returned to their homes in the wee small hours of the morning.

CURES CHRONIC CATARRH

Of the Nose, Throat, Lungs, Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels.

Wonderful New Discovery, Which Entirely Removes This Terrible Affliction.

FREE TREATMENT ON REQUEST

There is no other disease so widespread as Catarrh. It infests nearly every home and is felt to greater or less degree by almost all of us at some time during our lives.

Its ravages are not confined to the nose alone but it soon affects the Throat and Lungs, then the Stomach and Liver, and finally the Kidneys and Bowels become weakened and broken down by reason of the terrible curse of Catarrh. This disease is inflammatory in its nature and is very liable to affect the membranes and tissues of any vital organ or part of the system and produce results which cause a lifetime of suffering and regret.

Men of science and students of medicine have tried in vain for years to find a positive cure, but it has remained for one living in our own generation to finally discover what he claims to be a certain remedy for Catarrh of any organ of the body. His claims are vouched for by the words of hundreds of people whose honesty cannot be doubted; people who have suffered for years and tried every other known remedy without avail; people who had not faith at first but were finally cured and convinced of the wonderful power of this new discovery in medical science.

The famous physician to whom the credit belongs for this wonderful development and addition to twentieth-century science is Dr. J. A. LOMAS, 326 Fredericksen Bldg., South Bend, Ind. He will send anyone who is suffering from Catarrh a free treatment to prove the merits and wonderful curative properties of this new discovery. Readers are requested to describe their case when writing to the doctor for the Free Treatment. If you have any other disease, pain or affliction besides Catarrh, write the doctor about it and he will send a free treatment for that also at the same time he sends you the Free Treatment for Catarrh.

of King Robert to give a vital and impressive creation to the drama.

The role Mr. Sothern portrays is a dual characterization. First he is seen as the proud, handsome King, immediately afterwards as a grotesque court fool. He has opportunities not only for the romantic and the poetic, but also for a broad scope of character portrayal. His impersonation of Robert of Sicily portrays the steady uprising in the moral scale of a human being seen first steeped in iniquity and whose moral uplift is shown in ennoblement of body as well as in mind. It is declared to rank with the most notable examples of the art of the actor ever seen upon the stage.

The mediæval surroundings of the play, like McCarthy's former play, "If I Were King," to which Mr. Sothern high class dramatic attractions of the present decade.

It finds its basis in the historic incident of the memorable national conflict in which brother was arrayed to the death against brother—Americans battling against Americans. In its progress it reveals glimpses of the cruelties, the clamor and confusion of the battlefield and the stern discipline of camp life. It presents graphic glimpses of the perils of the spy and the ignominious death that awaits his capture and the scant reward which attends his success. And above and beyond all and through them gleams the unending light which dominates with its glow of romanticism—the light of woman's love—the indomitable love of Maryland Calvert, the heroine and the central figure in all the most thrilling climaxes of the
